Election will postpone beauty task force report

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

The recently formed Task Force on the City's Appearance will present a preliminary report, instead of a final report which was originally planned, to the mayor on Tuesday, March 15.

B. H. "Pat" Bridges Jr., task force chairman, said, the decision was made so the final report wasn't bounced around during the mayoral race.

"It's a wise decision," Bridges said. "A preliminary report will give us more time and give more depth to specific recommendations. The finished work will allow the dust to settle after the mayoral race."

Mayor Robert G. Jones almost single-handedly appointed the committee last year after council members failed to support the group.

Two public hearings were held by the committee to hear input from the public sector on the city's appearance but few attended.

Altogether 25 people attended the two meetings, Bridges said, but the committee also received 25 or 30 written recommendations.

"There were a wide variation of concerns," Bridges said, "mostly little things nagging people on their own little street."

"One observation is that there are a lot of concerns that are actually already covered on paper but the remedies aren't known," he said.

"Some items cost money others just involve citizen enthusiasm and cooperation," he continued. "We want to tap the citizen's interest and drum up the enthusiasm."

The committee is trying to centralize the issues around what the residents of Virginia Beach can do to help keep the appearance of the city beautiful, such as not throwing litter out of car windows or making their own backyard look more beautiful.

Bridges said that if the committee findings all cost money it would be the "death of their efforts."

"Some will cost money but we first have to identify what those

27 books - a-minute checked out "Biggest problem is success"

Since the Central Library's opening ceremonies a few weeks ago, between 500 and 750 new library cards have been issued, according to Carolyn Barkley, central librarian.

Not only is library-use up at the new library at 4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard, but library use is increasing all over the city, Martha J. Sims, director of the Virginia Beach Public Libraries said.

During the first week of operation, the same amount of material checked out at a branch library in a month was checked out in five days.

"We thought there would be a decline rather than an increase," Sims said. The Kempsville branch library had its busiest day ever the Wednesday following the central library's opening. Over 1,700 people visited the Kempsville library that day.

In the first two hours of the central library's grand opening, 287 new library cards were issued

Taking advantage of the warm weather

With the unseasonably warm weather Virginia Beach experienced this past weekend, many area families headed for the parks to take advantage of winter's reprieve. Here, five-year-old William

Reedtown rezoning turned down

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Councilman Harold Heischouer has asked the city to find a way to provide Reedtown residents better access to their homes.

He said that some property owners had agreed to provide right of way to improve the road system. He asked the city attorney's office to determine the legal status of the right of way with a view toward providing a road surface that would allow the people to go in and out without stepping knee deep in mud.

Heischouer, who voted last week against a higher density zoning on scattered parcels in Reedtown, a target neighborhood, said that the Witchduck Civic League, which had opposed the rezoning had totally different reasons than he perceived. He said that residents would have gone along with the rezoning if they were assured that the housing would be for low and moderate income housing. He added that the road conditions in the southern part of the community are terrible.

Higher density rezoning on five parcels of land in the Reedtown target neighborhood, supported by Councilman John L. Perry who has long championed affordable housing, has been turned down.

Perry argued before the city council last week that the rezoning would reduce the cost of the lots, making it possible for

Council supports ODU graduate center

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The proposed Old Dominion University/Virginia State University graduate center in Virginia Beach has the support of Virginia Beach City Council.

Monday city council unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the 1988 General Assembly to implement the center.

David R. Hager, ODU official, said that the educators are requesting $1.5 million for the two-year funding of the center which is expected to open in the fall of 1988.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan said that council should look not only at what the two universities want but what would be beneficial to Virginia Beach.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said that he understood that the intention was to bring Drainage contract awarded for Princess Anne

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

"The last time it rained my neighbors were unhappy with me," said Councilwoman Reba McClanan Monday. So, when council awarded a contract for the Princess Anne Plaza Drainage Bow Creek/Northgate project to C. L. Pincus Jr. and Company, Inc. for $95,922, she said, "Thank you; you saved me."

The Pincus bid was the low bid of four and will upgrade the capacity of the road crossings in McClanan's neighborhood to match the existing channel capacity which can accommodate a two-year short event. The system is much lower than the city standard but will provide some immediate relief to the affected residents, according to the staff.

Councilwoman Parker has been on both sides of the table

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

Nancy K. Parker has seen a lot of what the world has to offer. And, as a City Council member she has been on both sides of the table.

In the past, she was a member of the Old Beach Civic League and opposed the development of an outdoor bumper-car amusement park. The civic league went to city council and opposed it because of the noise it would cause for the neighborhood, and they won.

"It was the biggest learning experience," she said. "You have the advantage when your single issue oriented and have one particular need. (As a council member) you don't have the advantage; you have to look at the whole. Things are not black and white. There's a lot of grey. It makes it tough and it makes it challenging."

Parker, 41, ran at-large and won the seat last summer. About seven candidates were running for the at-large seats. Two slots were open and Parker received the top vote.

"I was pleasantly surprised," she said. "It was a tough race. It will be a year I'll always remember."

During her campaign for the council seat her brother was tragically killed the month before the election and later in the campaign both her children came down with chicken pox. But despite that, she said her first term on council has been exciting.

"It's 99 percent wonderful and I enjoy the challenge. Then you have your days. Like

"... (as a council member) You don't have the advantage; you have to look at the whole. Things are not black and white. There's a lot of grey. It makes it tough and it makes it challenging."

anything else it has its good and bad points," she said.

"There is not enough time to get it all done and not enough money. It's not council, it's just the system."

Parker said the strongest point of the city council is "the various backgrounds that each brings to the council seat. Each is an individual and each is unique."

Parker's background spans from Rhodes Island, where she was born, to Vietnam, to the ski slopes of Aspen, to European countries and of course to Virginia Beach, where she has lived since 1963.

"This is my home," she said. "This is where I raised my children."

Parker, who has two children, Jessica, who is nine-years-old and Casey, who is seven-years-old, graduated from Princess Anne High School in 1964 as an honor graduate.

She later went to Old Dominion University majoring in education and graduated in 1968. She taught first grade for one year at Point O'View Elementary.

From 1969 to 1970 she joined the Red Cross and went to Vietnam.

"It was a time in my life that I realized there was more going on in the world than in my little corner. At 21, 22, you have a different outlook. You don't think about it (death). You're invincible at that age," she said.

Her work in Vietnam entailed going to a firebase region where a group of men were stationed who had been in the field for over a month. The Red Cross gave a program that would last about an hour.

"It was something to help remove them from what they've been in," she said. "Just to show them that someone did care."

After Parker came back from Vietnam she taught for awhile and married John Parker, owner of Parker Pools.

Parker

For five years, Parker owned a Hot Dog restaurant that was at the end of 23rd Street, called Steamies Hot Dogs. During the summers she would do that and

Grand Prix

Green Flag the Grand Prix

The Virginia Beach Grand Prix — it has a nice ring to it. City council members believe it does too. They want to take advantage of the opportunity to have the race here.

The city is still looking into the matter and are considering the pros and cons of having the auto race right here in our backyard.

The initial investments are going to be high the first year and it is more than likely that the race won't bring in the profit the first year it is held.

Of course money has to be spent first before any real profits could be made. Road repairs for a race track would be where the majority of the money will be spent.

Detroit, which sponsors the Columbus Ford Dealers 500 IMSA Camel GT, has spent $2 million to improve its streets for the three day event. Road construction and repairs is nothing that Virginia Beach is foreign to but the repairs made to the streets for the auto race will have many other added benefits.

The pros to having the Grand Prix in our city are many. The added tourism, the national exposure, temporary jobs created and the eventual economy boost are just a few.

Having the Grand Prix here could add up to big bucks for the city if it is managed correctly. It's not something the city should jump right into and expect big profits. It would be an investment into the economic future of Virginia Beach.

The investment the city would make into it would have to be nurtured until it eventually becomes profitable. And the national exposure that it would have would bring added tourism to the resort city. — V.A.O.

Green Line

Developable land scarce

Last year about 15,000 people moved to Virginia Beach. The year before 20,000 came to the Beach. Although the number is decreasing, the population is still growing and land is becoming scarce.

The large number of people making the move to the Beach are putting a demand on the development of residential areas and shopping centers.

People are still moving into the city and most of the buildable land is taken. Last year about 33 square miles of undeveloped land remained north of the Green Line.

Two weeks ago, someone wanted to build houses on 83 acres of swamp and low lands. One-third couldn't be built on because of flooding. The remainder of it would need extensive drainage ponds and even then, the land may be unbuildable.

The undeveloped land around Sandbridge Road, West Neck Creek and North Landing River has the same problem. The land is swampy and the drainage and soils are poor in the areas.

Builders are still trying to squeeze the last dollar out of the remaining parcels of land north of the Green Line.

The battle over developable land is pushing closer and closer to the Green Line because the land is becoming limited. Pressure is going to be building on the Green Line and soon development will be pointing in that direction.

As Virginia Beach grows and stretches, the pressure on the Green Line is going to stretch south also. — V.A.O.

HOV lanes

Senate backs closing of lanes

The HOV lanes are becoming close to extinction in Virginia Beach at least for a while. The Senate has backed the closing of the HOV's on expressways in Virginia Beach.

Moody E. Stallings Jr., D-Virginia Beach and Del. Glenn R. Croshaw have been decending the bill to end commuter lane restrictions in Virginia Beach.

The state's two highest ranking transportation officials, Secretary Vivian E. Watts and Commissioner Ray D. Pethel, have argued against it before a subcommittee of the House Roads Commission and criticized the bill saying that it's not a black and white issue, with all opposition and no support.

The argument focuses on the 30 percent of respondents who say that they would never use the HOV lanes and the 30 percent that say that they would if they could find passengers.

That argument is similar to arguing if a glass of water is half full or half empty.

Norfolk council should appoint its own citizens

Editor:

It is unthinkable that the Norfolk City Council, representing the citizens of Norfolk, should be given the authority to appoint citizens of Virginia Beach (or of any jurisdiction other than Norfolk) to the board of the Norfolk Port and Industrial Authority.

The Authority not only manages the airport but has the right to eminent domain to condemn private property (Norfolk's private property) for public use.

It also has the authority to give away federal tax-dollars through the granting of tax-exemptions for corporate bond issues.

Members from jurisdictions other than Norfolk could be expected to vote in favor of issues which were favorable to their jurisdictions and to their interests, and to vote against issues unfavorable to them. A simple majority vote is sufficient for action by the Authority.

When the issue of extending the Norfolk runway was being considered, the Norfolk delegation to the General Assembly stated, quite frankly, at a meeting of a local civic league, that they had no authority at all in the situation. Norfolk City Council also said that they only appointed members and had no jurisdiction over the operations of the Authority. If the federal government, through the Federal Aviation Authority, granted funds and approved the extension, the citizens of Norfolk could not, through either vote or petition, prevent this action being taken.

It was obvious, then, that the citizens of Norfolk had no control whatsoever, and that their influence was limited to the authority of the Norfolk City Council to appoint members of the board, at present restricted to Norfolk citizens.

That this tenuous influence should be diluted in any way is appalling, and that this should be done by Norfolk City Council, representing the citizens of Norfolk, is unthinkable.

Illegalize "slave trade" of lost pets

Editor:

In my work as Director of Virginians Against Cruelty to Animals, I often hear from concerned individuals who have lost a beloved dog (or cat) and have, as a last resort, called to ask my help.

I usually begin by reassuring them that the chances are good they will find their dog, but then I must get around to telling them that the possibility does exist that their dog might wind up in a pound or shelter which sells (or gives) its animals to research, either through a dealer or directly, a practice known as "pound seizure" or "pound release."

I must then give these people a long list of names, addresses and telephone numbers (13 of them) of USDA-licensed animal dealers. Please see Pets, page 10

Off the Record

By Valerie A. Olander

Yo! Skins' fans, how 'bout Those Tigers?

Okay Red Skins' fans it's time to take off the red and yellow.

You won one and it's time to quit rubbing it in. Especially when you try to rub it in to people that are from Detroit and have no idea what it's like to have a winning football team.

But how about those Tigers? The Detroit Tigers? Have you ever heard of baseball, the great American sport? Too bad Virginia doesn't have a good ol' baseball team to root for this spring. Okay maybe you have the Tidewater Tides, the New York Mets farm team, but minor leagues just can't compare.

Maybe the city council should consider getting a major league baseball team in Virginia Beach instead of the Grand Prix.

But it still wouldn't matter Detroit has a baseball team and a Grand Prix. And we don't have to root for someone else's football team either, even though we don't have much of a team to root for.

But anyways, baseball fever is much more fun than watching a bunch of grown men running into each other.

In about a month, I'll be sitting in the state of Virginia while everyone back home will be calling into work sick because it is opening day at the ball park on Michigan and Trumbull.

The hardest part is waiting and waiting. It seems like hours before your hot dog is manhandled by cheering fans and gets down to your seat.

All the young baseball fans will be heading into the stadium with their baseball gloves, hoping to catch a ball going into the stands, while those less fortunate had to go to school and try to catch the score on their walkman when the teacher isn't looking.

I bet Virginians haven't even tasted a real ball park frank. Especially one that is steamed in a metal box that some guy carries around his neck yelling, "Hot dogs, Hot dogs!" All you have to do is yell "Yo!" and the greatest tasting hot dog will be passed down the row while people act inconvenienced that they have to take their eyes off the game for a few seconds to pass you the steamy dog.

The hardest part is waiting, and waiting. It seems like hours before your hot dog is manhandled by cheering fans and gets down to your seat. Then of course there is always the risk that one of those Tigers might hit one out of the ball park onto Kaline Drive while you're waiting for it. Then you might as well forget it. If the ball goes out of the park, so does your ball park frank.

The bleacher creatures originated from Detroit too. These are the gung-ho fans that sit 300 yards out, near Kaline Drive and yell obscenities at the other team. They also like to throw things on the field when the ump makes a bad call. They would take a ball park frank right out of your hand if they had the chance to throw it.

Then there is the wave. The wave originated in Detroit, too. It started when a bleacher creature threw another bleacher creature from the stands because the ump called Lou Whitaker out for stealing second. I was there, he was safe. But everyone in that section stood up to see what happened to the bleacher creature and then everyone else in the next section wanted to see what was going on so they stood up. So the next thing you know everyone was getting up and sitting down in rotation and everyone figured that it was pretty fun.

Op-ed

School decision — making: When the state should mandate

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

Under the Constitution of Virginia, which went into effect in 1971, education holds a prominent place and is contained in Article VIII of that document. In paragraph 1, the General Assembly is clearly charged with the responsibility to "... provide for a system for free public elementary and secondary schools for all children of school age ... and shall seek to ensure that an educational program of high quality is established and continually maintained."

In order to do this, the 'Standards of Quality' were prescribed which can be revised from time to time only by the General Assembly. The manner of funding education in the various localities is also left up to the General Assembly. Out of this arose the State Basic Aid Formula, now to dards of Quality' were prescribed which can be revised from time to time only by the General Assembly. The manner of funding education in the various localities is also left up to the General Assembly. Out of this arose the State Basic Aid Formula, now to be called 'Foundation Funding.' Several other paragraphs are included pertaining to the State Board of Education, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, the Literary Fund, etc. The local school board is identified in paragraph 7 in which the power of running the local system is granted. A host of Attorney General opinions are included to clarify the intent of the General Assembly.

In making the Standards of Quality a matter of law, the General Assembly took a great leap in limiting the power of the localities in running their districts. The Standards also opened the door for more intrusions by state government into local school affairs. Many laws have been passed to refine, clarify, and implement the Standards, the least of these being laws to adequately fund the programs they call for. VEA has made progress in its long-standing battle with legislators to fully fund the Standards, which is another of Gov. Baliles' goals.

Several issues still beg to be resolved, however, and Governor Baliles' education programs reach out to solve some of the inequities and problems that still exist. A close examination of the Standards reveals that many localities are far from satisfying the intent, and even the language of the Standards of Quality. Some of these insufficiencies are the fault of the state, but others are due to a lack of support at the local level. What is the state's responsibility when one of its localities falls short in its effort to provide a quality education to each of its school age children?

One example is when the state provides sufficient funds to give every teacher a certain percent salary increase, and not all of the localities comply. The General Assembly has, so far, refused to mandate that increase. The Governor has recommended another incentive program which was also enacted under Gov. Robb. Such a program rewards those localities which meet the intent of the General Assembly with funds that are equalized under the State Aid Formula.

Another proposal of the Governor rolls funds for unencumbered time for lunch for teachers into the State Aid Formula, but the funds are not mandated. VEA will monitor the use of these funds closely to see how many localities decide to use the money for other things. If this occurs, a request for mandated money will likely occur.

In Virginia, there are few things that localities can do without the expressed permission of the General Assembly. Yet, in regard to schools as well as other constitutional areas, local autonomy vs. state mandates is an issue that surfaces each year in one form or another and sets out the vexing question as to when the state has a legitimate right or pressing need to intervene in local decision-making.

In the face of the many disparities and inequities, regardless of whether the local or the state is at fault, VEA feels that the General Assembly must be assertive to bring about fairness and equality. Gov. Baliles has taken some important steps in that direction.

Planetarium schedule for February set

The public program for the Virginia Beach Planetarium in February will be "from the Shadows of the Pyramids."

Intriguing facts about the pyramids are revealed. Were they really huge sundials whose shadows indicated the seasons and the length of the year? Was the Great Pyramid of Cheops built by alignments with certain stars? Does the shape of the pyramid have special powers over people and things?

These questions and many more are entertained during the February program.

Program times are Sundays from 7 to 8 p.m., Feb. 7, 14, 21, 28 and Tuesdays from 7 to 8 p.m., Feb. 2, 9, 16, and 23.

The planetarium seats 120 people and is easily accessible from the Route 44 toll road by taking the Lynnhaven Exit (Exit 5A) to the Lynnhaven Parkway and turning right at the first street — South Lynnhaven Road — to Plaza Junior High School where the planetarium is located.

Telephone the planetarium office at 431-4067 Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. for reservations. Admission is free.

Tigers

Then there is the "Lou, Lou!" chant. When the MVP second baseman gets up to bat everyone starts yelling, "Lou, Lou!" It sounds like the fans are booing but Lou knows we're cheering for him.

Virginians can never imagine the excitement of a foul ball coming your way. I usually duck but some kamikaze fans try to catch it with their bare hands. I'd rather have all my fingers intact than have a souvenir ball.

and go to bed. The World Series is like winning World War III but with much more enthusiasm.

Everyone runs outside of their house while fireworks go off. If you were driving in a car down the street when the Tigers took the championship you would know it. Cars come to a dead stop, people jump out of their car and start hugging people they don't even know. We're very sentimental when it comes to our Tigers. It's like a great big New Years Eve party.

You can have your Red Skins, Dead Skins or Potato Skins. I'll take the Tigers and baseball fever any day.

All the other research into the HOV lanes show that the lanes aren't working and probably never will.

Tidewater Regional Transit has been running a ride sharing program but its success has been minimal.

Stallings has said that the HOV lanes have worked in Northern Virginia because many of the commuters are government workers and share the same office and working schedules. But the same is not true of commuters in Virginia Beach.

Stallings and Croshaw aren't trying to ban the HOV lanes altogether, they are just trying to eliminate the lanes until similar ones are placed on I-64, which will be sometime in the 1990's.

Even then it is uncertain if the HOV lanes will work. Presently, the empty lanes are proof that the lanes aren't working and most likely never will. All the money and effort that is put into making the HOV lanes work right now appears to be a waste of time and the taxpayer's money. The empty HOV lanes are a sign that the overall plan wasn't what the public wants or needs. — V.A.O.

Parker became president of the Old Beach Civic League when Butch Kitchen, the founder and past president, became a member of council. Later she was appointed to the planning commission, and two and a half years later the opportunity opened for the city council seat that she presently has.

"I was fortunate to do a lot of things. It helped me mold an outlook to see different cultures and how people deal with life," she said.

Parker spoke of flying in a helicopter in Vietnam and looking down on a rice paddy where a man sat near his little hooch. His father before him probably owned the land as did his father before. The man didn't seem to even care that there was a war going on, he just worked his fields as if nothing was happening.

"People don't understand the vast disparity of living," she said.

Her goal: "To be able to help chart the course of moderation that allows for the development of the city in which the quality of life goes hand-in-hand with the economic development of the city for the future."

Income Tax advice, financial workshops offered at Beach Central Library

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

The Virginia Beach Central Library has four upcoming programs for people interested in business and finance.

The library has set aside the month of February to help people with filing their income tax and give financial advice.

Carolyn Barkley, central librarian, said that business and financial reference has always been extremely active in city libraries.

Barkley said a variety of people who are tax planners or experts in the field of business and finance will head the programs and the library will offer supplemental reading material.

She expects a cross section of the community to attend the programs which are limited to about 50 people.

The first of these programs begins on Monday, Feb. 8 at 7:15 p.m. It is a two part financial workshop by Glen Hersch and James Finnerell, local financial institution representatives. The second part of the program will be held on Thursday, Feb. 11 at 7:15 p.m.

Barkley said that the program will deal with a variety of topics such as tax planning and insurance.

On Thursday, Feb. 18 a pre-retirement workshop will take place at the library. It will begin at 6:30 p.m. and will give advice on ways to plan for retirement.

The stock market crash of 1987 will be discussed on Sunday, Feb. 21 at 2 p.m. It will cover the implications that the crash has had on people, how it occurred and why it was similar to the crash of 1929.

A program on the new tax laws will be on Thursday, Feb. 25 from 7 to 9 p.m.

There is no charge for the programs, although a workbook may be purchased for the two-part financial workshop.

The programs will be held in one of the two meeting rooms in the Central Library. Each session is allowed 50 people per program. Barkley expects that each session will be full. For registration and more information call the library at 431-3070.

C.A.R. plant tree at Beach library

Members of Cavalier Society, Children of the American Revolution, sponsored by Princess Anne County Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, recently planted a cardboard tree on the grounds of the soon-to-be landscaped new Virginia Beach Public Library.

In honor of the Bicentennial of the Constitution, C.A.R. societies all over the nation are planting trees in public places as "a living legacy" to the Constitution. Since the city was not quite ready in September to landscape the grounds of the new library, members of Cavalier Society gathered on the grounds and planted a "symbolic" tree. A cash donation was made to the city to pay for a real tree when the landscaping is finished.

The C.A.R. is the oldest and largest national patriotic youth organization. Member engage in projects for Government Studies, National Heritage, Conservation, American Indians and Mountain Schools.

Members of this organization trace their ancestry to patriots and soldiers of the American Revolution. Members are eligible from birth to age twenty two. For further information about this youth group call 486-5288.

Birdneck Elementary School wins World Books; students raise more than $10,000 in read-a-thon

During a two-month read-a-thon, Birdneck Elementary students raised more than $10,000 to buy 25 sets of World Book Encyclopedias, 20 Childcraft Encyclopedia sets, and three Science Encyclopedia sets for their school library.

The read-a-thon, under the auspices of World Book, encouraged students to get sponsors for each book they read and to read a minimum of seven books. Birdneck principal Gene Gregory said the read-a-thon was the perfect fund-raising activity because it focused on reading and provided a "terrific" educational benefit for the entire school.

Under the read-a-thon guidelines, the school could purchase a World Book set for $499, and World Book contributed one dollar toward the cost of a set for each two dollars raised. The final tally showed that Birdneck students raised $10,742. World Book added $5,304 for a total of $16,046 which the school used for the purchase of the reference books.

Gregory turned to the PTA for help in organizing and operating the read-a-thon. "We couldn't have been so successful without the help of our PTA and our classroom teachers encouraging the students to read," Gregory said. PTA members collected contributions and tallied the amounts by class and grade level.

Sixth grader Lee Lind read the most books (77), and second grader Vanessa Meyers raised the most money ($112.50). Sherry Kelly's sixth grade class read the most books (325), while Janice Logan's second grade class raised the most money of all Birdneck classes ($485.75). Leading the grade levels in raising money was the second grade with $2,345.12.

Gregory said that when the reference books arrive, the school will hold assemblies by grade level to award certificates and medals to students who read more than seven books. "They will also get to see the fruits of their reading first-hand," Gregory said, "because the World Book sets will be on display."

The PTA coordinator of the read-a-thon was special education teacher Connie Allen.

Works by four locals appear in journal

Works by four local students have been selected to appear in the latest issue of Virginia Writing, a journal of writing and art by high school students and teachers.

The Winter 1987-88 issue contains works by Scott Bruggeman, Kim Pollard and Chris Sproule, all of whom are from Frank W. Cox High School; and by Cecily Ochoa of Green Run High School.

Bruggeman, Pollard and Ochoa contributed untitled artworks, and Sproule contributed a short story titled "A Reinder

Ochoa's work is from the 1987 Virginia Governor's School and was provided by the Fine Arts Service of the Virginia Department of Education.

Virginia Writing, which is published twice a year at Longwood College in Farmville, is believed to be the nation's first statewide journal devoted exclusively to the best writings, art and photography by high school students and teachers. It is edited by Billy C. Clark, the College's writer-in-residence.

In the most recent issue, which is the third issue, the selected works are from 50 students and eight teachers.

Last year, the premiere issue, which appeared in December 1986, was selected as one of three outstanding "special publications" produced by colleges and universities in the United States and Canada. It was cited for "distinguished achievement" and "excellence in educational journalism" by the Educational Press Association of America.

Contributions are currently being accepted for the Spring issue.

Maritime Museum receives facelift

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

What was then the Seatack Life-Saving Number 2 in 1878 is now the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum.

The wood boathouse which stands at what is now 24th Street and Atlantic Avenue is the oldest part of Virginia Beach history and has been redesigned by Chris White Designs, Inc., of Annapolis, Md.

The Coast Guard station was decommissioned in January of 1969, 91 years after it had begun its vigil over the ships that sailed along the Virginia coastline.

In 1981 it opened its doors for the home of artifacts and documents that tell the story of Virginia Beach as far back as 1878. It is the city's first museum.

The museum's Lower Gallery now houses all new exhibits about the U.S. Life-Saving Service in Virginia Beach and the Upper Gallery has another permanent exhibit, Shipwrecks.

Presently, the museum is also featuring the works of Barclay Sheaks, whose subjects are from the Virginia Tidewater area.

The hours for the museum are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

VBAC presents Artmobile exhibition

"Fragments," a Virginia Museum Artmobile exhibition, will be on view at the Virginia Beach Arts Center beginning Tuesday, Feb. 16, at 1711 Arctic Avenue.

The Artmobile will be parked at the Center and will be open Tuesday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m.; Wednesday, 9 a.m. to noon 1 to 3 p.m., and 6 to 8 p.m.; Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon, 1 to 3 p.m., and 6 to 8 p.m.; and Friday, 9 a.m. to noon, and 1 to 5 p.m.

"Fragments" contains old and new objects from around the world. The exhibit explores what fragments say about the cultures that produced them and how we decipher this information. It focuses also on fragments as inspiration in art and concludes by considering how 20th-century artists appropriate fragments to create new art.

Seventeen pieces are included in the exhibition, ranging in date from approximately 1500 B.C. to the present time. Fragments of art works from Egypt, Rome, India, Peru, Japan, Africa and early America are combined with 17th and 18th-century Italian, English and 20th-century American works.

The first of the exhibit's three sections presents fragments of art, including a partially reconstructed piece of 18th-century German stoneware excavated from a site near Williamsburg, lent by the Virginia Research Center for Archaeology. Other objects in the section include a headless Egyptian sculpture which can be identified only through the hieroglyphics on its base, and a set of ancient Peruvian owl bells whose function can be determined only by comparing them with complete works of art which show them in use.

The second section explores art about fragments. Included in this section are works by 17th-century Italian artist Giovanni Battista Piranesi, who produced hundreds of prints of classical ruins reflecting his era's fascination with excavations, and by 20th-century English sculptor Henry Moore, who attempted to capture the power and mystery of England's Stonehenge in his prints.

The final section presents 20th-century American art made from fragments.

"Fragments" emphasizes education and is of interest to students of all ages and disciplines — children through adults. The Artmobile will be open designated hours to school children, community groups, and members of the public.

Thursday, Feb. 18, at 7 p.m. the Artmobile Curator Kursti North will present an illustrated lecture, "The Fragments," in the Arts Center. It is free and open to the public.

Additional information regarding the Artmobile's visit to the Virginia Beach Arts Center may be obtained by telephoning 425-0000.

Three exhibitions scheduled for Art Center

The exhibitions will be on display Feb. 9 through March 6 at the Virginia Beach Arts Center. Visions: 25 X 5 is a photography exhibition on loan from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts through its Traveling Exhibition and Media Services. 28 X 5 features the work of five photographers: Sally Mann of Lexington, Elizabeth Stephens-Koesters of Salem, Terence Roberts of Wilmington, Decl., Nancy Spencer of Lexington, and Robert Sulkin of Roanoke.

The subject matter chosen by the five artists is varied. Mann, in her series "Twelve-Year-Old Girls," highlights the transition from childhood to womanhood by focusing her camera on adolescent girls, "deliberately posed to capture the tension between innocence and knowledge," according to Maureen Morrisette, author of the accompanying exhibition text panels. Mann's works are receiving increasing renown in leading galleries, and can also be seen in the current Virginia Museum Uncommon Ground exhibition. Sulkin and Roberts hand-color their photographs, weakening the boundaries between photography and painting. Sulkin's arrangements emphasize the relationship of objects and space, and Roberts uses infrared film, lending a ghostly tone to his landscapes. Roberts is a past winner of the Boardwalk Art Show Best-in-Show Award.

Stephens-Koesters documents construction sites, enigmatically devoid of human activity, in color and black and white. Spencer's photographs figures in an exotic doll-house furnished with pincushion mattresses and turkey-claw hat racks, raising questions about human relationships in the domestic domain.

Bill Wagner, head of Graduate Programs in the Art Department at Old Dominion University, shows a series of small drawings in the corridor galleries. Wagner's works begin as doodles and, as they develop, lyrical and ambiguous facets appear. Wagner is well-known for his formal modernist sculptures.

Frederick Chiriboga displays a grouping of oil paintings dealing with figures in carnal and mysterious environments. Reminiscent of Hieronymus Bosch, early surrealism, and Gustav Klimt, Chiriboga's works are personal and reflect his continued interest in Medieval Art.

The exhibition is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Virginia Beach Arts Center at 425-0000.

Beach Pops will present concert

The Virginia Beach Pops Orchestra, conducted by Walter Noona, will perform a "Presidential Holiday Concert" sponsored by the Arts and Humanities Commission of Virginia Beach on Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the Pavilion Theater.

This concert will feature American music including Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man," "Variations of America" by Ives, "Pops Hoedown" by Hayman, Rodger's "Victory at Sea" and selections from Oklahoma.

Also featured on this Presidential Concert will be two high school age musicians from the Hampton Roads area. Matthew Van Hoose will play the MacDowell Piano Concerto and Antawn Holliday will play the Glazunov Concerto for saxophone. The Green Run High School Colorguard will present some of their routines for the audience.

This concert will be general admission with early arrivals choosing the best seats. Admission prices are $7.50 for adults and $5 for children, military, and senior citizens. For tickets or more information call 428-8000.

Jerry Via featured at museum

Jerry Via, a biology professor at Virginia Tech, will speak on "Marsh Birds" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 4, at the Virginia Marine Science Museum.

Via, who has his Ph.D. in zoology from Virginia Tech, is the fourth of six speakers in a lecture series sponsored by the museum on "Life in the Salt Marsh."

Lectures by other scientists from around the state on the ecology of Virginia's salt marshes will continue at 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays through February 18. The cost is $3 per program for museum members and $4 for non-members. A reception at the Museum's Chesapeake Bay Aquarium will follow each program. For reservation information, contact the museum at 425-3476.

would be," he said. "City council doesn't have unlimited funds."

There are a total of 16 committee members. Bridges oversees the whole committee and maintains the rapport of the group. After the public hearings the group was divided into four subcommittees: architecture and zoning; highways; waterways, trails, and greenbelts; and horticulture and lands.

Each subcommittee will focus on their area of improvement. They will come up with goals that will improve the city's appearance, and then they will offer strategies of how to reach the goals that they have designated.

Mayor Robert G. Jones said the committee is a "competent group of people."

"They are people who have expressed a clear concern and have expertise to add to it," he said.

Jones said the Task Force on the City's Appearance will have an "indefinite lifetime and then will cease to exist."

"They will set up a plan and then ask city council to approve committees," Jones said. "The plan is to make Virginia Beach the most beautiful city in America by the year 2000 — that's Pat Bridges' goal."

the owners to provide affordable housing.

Water, sewer, roads and drainage are being provided by Federal Community Development block grant funds.

Reed Associates, who have acquired the parcels totaling 7.108 acres, requested rezoning from R-4 Residential District to R-6 Residential District on the scattered parcels.

Residents of the affluent nearby communities of Thoroughgood Colony, Wishart Cove and Witchduck objected to the rezonings because they were spot zonings, would increase the density in the area thereby taxing the transportation system and reduce the value of the properties.

The rezoning application as denied by a vote of 10-1 with Perry dissenting.

Perry pointed out that the developers would be permitted to build 20 homes, an increase of four on what they will be permitted to build with the present zoning. He said that now the Reedtown property owners cannot afford to build anything.

Reedtown is a black neighborhood where the original property owners of their antecedents owned their land long before the surrounding developments.

Peter Poole, representing Wishart's Cove, cited the Comprehensive Plan as supporting his opposition.

Ann Denny, president of the Witchduck Civic League, submitted a petition signed by over 400 residents in opposition. She said the people objected because the rezonings would not conform to the Comprehensive Plan or the plan for the target area, that they could comprise spot zoning, that they would set a precedent for higher density zoning in the area. The applicants, she pointed out, are not residents of the area.

Carol M. Monroe, president of the Thoroughgood Colony Civic League, said that the traffic pattern in Reedtown is restricted.

The Planning Department found the rezonings unacceptable because they were not in keeping with the Comprehensive Plan or with the policy statements for the Community Development Target areas. Also the department pointed out, the application represents a piecemeal approach to an area which should be developed as a unit.

Library

and 27 books-a-minute were checked out. During the first week of operation, the same amount of materials checked out at a branch library in a month was checked out in five days.

Since opening, the library has been busy. Library officials were uncertain over the exact amount of people who have frequented the library but the 300-space parking lot has been full, Barkley said.

Sims said, "It has definitely been an overwhelming success."

The success of Virginia Beach's largest library has also drawn a few complaints from the public over the crowded conditions at the library.

Barkley said that the 20 staff members who work on an average day at the library are "a little pushed" but she also had said that this is the busy time of the year for any library.

Sims said, "We are surprised at the few number of complaints. The public has been very patient given the long lines and waits at the book check out. The building was overused the first week of operation."

The computers went down last Wednesday causing problems for patrons at the library.

"The transactions were occurring at such a fast rate the buffer to the computer filled up. We are isolating what the problem is and making adjustments," Sims said.

Presently the library is also short six or seven computers. Barkley said that the furniture has not arrived to put them on.

"We are overwhelmed presently," Barkley said. "People have been waiting for the opening. This has exceeded anything that we expected, but it's kind of nice."

Sims said, "In a sense, the biggest problem could be perceived as a compliment that people are using the library. The initial opening level of demand ultimately will level off."

"We are real pleased the way things are working," she said. "I guess you could say our biggest problem is our success."

throughout the state, in addition to the addresses and phone numbers of pounds and shelters who sell to dealers. This begins a long, expensive, time consuming, and distressful search.

If, in the end, their search for their lost or stolen companion does prove fruitful, they are fortunate, but those who are not successful, must forever wonder if they were just too late.

Virginia's residents — particularly those living in and around counties which practice pound seizure — should not be made to live in fear that their devoted companion, if stolen or lost, might one day end up on a laboratory table.

A bill has been introduced in the House of Delegates which would make this shameful "slave trade" in lost and abandoned pets illegal.

Please call your Voter Registrar for the phone number of your delegate in Richmond (or for his or her local number) and call in your support of House Bill 933 (H.B. 933) today.

In the meantime, please make sure your pet is wearing an identification tag. For greater protection, have a veterinarian tattoo your pet with your Social Security number. It is quick, painless, and can help insure your dog's (or cat's) safe return, if he or she is lost or stolen.

Virginia Tech and the University of Virginia into the graduate center.

McClanahan said that she wanted something that would attract industry. She said that industry wanted an institution where its personnel could take classes.

Watts said the two-university programs is the first step in a combined program. Watts said that the State Council on Higher Education indicated it would be the first step in providing all the programs in Virginia.

Mayor Robert G. Jones said that ODU and NSU need strong endorsement to win state support although "we want to be concerned about quality."

Hager said that the state council approved the concept at a Jan. 6 meeting and that a budget amendment has been submitted. Strong support is needed behind a budget amendment, he said.

He said that ODU serves 2,000 students a year at its Kempville Junior High School center and that more adequate space is needed. Graduate programs will include business, education, social sciences, engineering and computer sciences. The Center first will be located in leased office space. However, the educators are considering eventual location near Tidewater Community College so to create an educational center and to share resources.

Future plans also call for providing junior and senior undergraduate studies to supplement the first two years offered at community college.

He said the school officials have identified a potential site containing 20,000 square feet of space.

City council adopts resolution to permit runners in Seashore Park

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Seashore State Park is part of the reason why the Shamrock Marathon is so popular.

Jerry Bocrie, promoter of the race, said the runners like the course through part of the park and the boardwalk. They like the course because it's safe and fast.

But the Virginia Division of Parks and Recreation of the Department of Conservation and Historical Resources notified the race sponsors last year that they would not be allowed to use the park for the race. With the race about a month away, city council Monday adopted a resolution requesting permission from the state to allow the runners to use the park for the 16th annual Shamrock Marathon.

Bocrie told council that the race was started 16 years ago as a qualifying race for the Boston Marathon. The budget for the race is over $100,000 generating $2 million in revenue. Bocrie also said that a quarter of million dollars has been raised for various charities.

The race, one of the most organized, he said, has 700 volunteers. Many who enter the race want to qualify for the Olympic Trials.

He said the race has been using Seashore State Park for 15 years. Only the paved roads and a ten foot trail in the park are used with only two hours of the race going through the park.

Bayside incident; real and rumored

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Events at Bayside Junior High School last week, both real and rumored, damaged the reputation of the school and the city. Dr. James E. Melvin, superintendent of schools, told city council at an informal session Monday.

But Melvin said he was not interested in pointing a finger of blame at anyone, but in "getting our act together."

One of the things the city can do to improve the situation, he said, is to make the schools smaller. He said that the city's schools are very large which makes for more problems. Large schools are economical, he said, but still, the city should "work to make our schools smaller."

Melvin said that this is the first locality where he has served where the governing body has been interested enough to ask the superintendent to share. "People are prone to supply their own facts if they don't have the information," he said.

"We're going to get our people together, parents, teachers, PTA, and begin to talk about problems there and other places." — Dr. James E. Melvin.

The problem started on Feb. 2, Tuesday, when a gun was confiscated from a Black ninth-grade student. The student has been suspended. For this offense, Melvin said, school policy requires that the administration recommend expulsion to the school board. The school board makes the final decision.

A second hand gun was confiscated from a Black ninth-grade student on Thursday, Feb. 4. Another student had brought the gun for his friend who said he was being harassed by students from Bayside High School. He also has been suspended.

According to a report prepared by the school, also on Thursday during a lunch period in the cafeteria, a group of Black students and White students had a "stare off" and exchanged some words.

Also on Thursday, the school principal Julius C. Wooten; Donald Harvey, secondary staff assistant, and Dorothy Barber, director, Office of Community Relations, received calls regarding a rumor that Bayside would have a problem on the next day.

The 'problem' came to a head on Friday when, at approximately 7:15 a.m., on Z-104 (WNVZ) received a telephone call indicating there was going to be a "beat whitey day" at Bayside Junior. The caller said her brother, a Virginia Beach policeman told her to keep her daughter home because there would be trouble at the school.

Z-104 took the call lightly, but according to the school report, the momentum grew from concerned parents as the station took more on-air calls from parents and students.

Later that morning all three television networks, a Z-104 reporter, and newspaper reporter all went to the school to see what was going on.

But there were no incidents that day.

Wooten on Friday distributed a letter to parents detailing the events of the past week. Also, the school report noted, Z-104 reported 10 to 12 police cars at the school the morning of Feb. 4 and 5 and there were none.

Approximately 250 students were absent from the 1,577 student body Friday and an additional 30 students called parents to take them home.

Also that day, a teacher turned in an unloaded B-B gun that a student had given to her when he realized he had done the wrong thing in taking it to school.

On Monday, Wooten said, 215 students were absent.

The fact that a student had a gun at school is not a highly unusual event, Melvin said, saying that people tend to wear rose-colored glasses about how it used to be.

In the Bayside case, he said, a small Black youngster who was afraid of a large Black youngster, took his grandfather's gun. The small boy was not causing any problems in school, Melvin said. He said that carrying a gun to school is a serious violation. "We can take away his rights (to go to school)."

But the activity, itself, is not highly unusual in today's society, he said. He said that it would not have been considered unusual in Florida or Georgia where he served before.

He said that the problem was not racially motivated. Two organizations at school are known as the Heads and The Grits. He had been under the impression that one was Black and the other White. But both are White groups.

He said that the Bayside school has an unusual makeup. The student body ranges from low income to very wealthy. The racial mix is 30 percent minority. Twenty-five percent is Black. He said that it was fortunate for him that President of American Medical Association leads busy days.

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

An average day for the president of the American Medical Association could involve traveling out of town, attending state medical association meetings, testifying in Washington D.C. before a committee on medical matters, making speaking engagements, visiting and attending to medical schools, or act as a liaison to nursing, dental, or pharmaceutical groups.

To Dr. William S. Hotchkiss, M.D., it is all routine. "Half the time I'm traveling," he said. "I don't do much practice. I'm almost too busy. I see my old patients but I don't take any new ones."

His office is located on Old Greenbrier Road in Chesapeake but Hotchkiss and his wife, Virginia, reside in Virginia Beach.

They have three grown children: William Jr., who performs electronic work at Talbet Manufacturing Co.; Richard, who is a doctor on the staff at the Washington University Medical School in St. Louis; and Mary, who is the wife of a doctor in Charleston. They also have five grandchildren.

Hotchkiss has been a doctor in the Hampton Roads area since 1951. He is a past president of the medical staff of Leigh Memorial Hospital in Norfolk where he is currently a member of the attending staff. He is a consultant and former chief, department of thoracic surgery at Norfolk General Hospital, and consultant to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Hampton, and the Maryview Hospital in Portsmouth. He is also on the attending staff at Chesapeake General Hospital, where he has been on the staff since it opened in 1975-76.

Hotchkiss is a thoracic surgeon. In other words, he deals with diseases of the chest.

Lung cancer is what he treats most frequently. "The specialty started becoming of age in the '40's. During World War II (the field of) medicine had perfected the operation procedure."

Tuberculosis is less common today. Lung cancer, related to smoking, is the most common disease of the chest.

Hotchkiss said more women are smoking more and there is an increase in the number of women with lung cancer. He said that the statistics in the past showed four men to one woman with lung cancer. Today it is presently two to one.

Hotchkiss, who was born in Waco, Texas, received his B.S. degree from McMurry College in Texas, where in 1985 he received the Distinguished Alumnus Award. He received the award while he was chairman of the American Medical Association (AMA) Board of Trustees.

He earned his M.D. degree at the University of Texas Medical School in Galveston and also received an Ashbel Smith Distinguished Alumnus Award from the college in 1987.

Hotchkiss interned at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. After interning he served in the U.S. Public Health Service, the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Navy from 1941 until 1946.

He said he went into the Public Health Service and U.S. Coast Guard before the United States got involved in World War II.

From 1941-42 he was on convoy duty in the North Atlantic on a Coast Guard cutter. He was the doctor on the ship, which is similar to a destroyer.

While in the Public Health Service he provided medical services to the Coast Guard and Navy. During wartime, the Navy takes over the Public Health Service and Coast Guard.

After 1942, his Navy orders for the duration of the war brought him to Norfolk at the Public Health Service Hospital.

He went back to Henry Ford Hospital after the war for his residency training in thoracic surgery. His residency was completed at the Veterans Hospital in McKinney, Texas.

Sex education

Every fifth child born in Virginia is illegitimate. Half of the non-white births in the state are illegitimate and illegitimate births among whites have doubled since 1965.

These appalling statistics were provided at a public hearing in Richmond by Dr. Leo J. Dunn, obstetrics and gynecology chairman at Medical College of Virginia.

In 1985, Dr. Dunn said, there were 660 pregnancies among girls age 14 or younger in Virginia; teenagers reported 10,500 births, 59 percent of them illegitimate; and that 8,500 teenagers had abortions that year.

Gov. Gerald Baliles has proposed a debatable $5.5 million state-mandated "sex-ed" program to attack the perplexing problem. This may not be the answer warns Dr. Joseph Zanga, a member of the pediatrics faculty at MCV. He says sex education has appeared to promote teenage sexual activity in a state like California. Dr. Zanga proposes an alternative program putting more stress on the "just-say-no" approach.

They both make a point. Perhaps a sex-ed program in public schools will convince Virginia teenagers to just-say-no. And if they don't say no, sex-ed advocates say, they might say "let's be safe."

The General Assembly must now wrestle with a problem that has been the responsibility of parents. With one of five Old Dominion children born illegitimate, the parents are not doing very well. Maybe legislators and educators can do it better. — H.B.

Candidates have rights too

An upcoming bill initiated by Sen. Moody E. Stallings Jr., will change a state law preventing any from conspiring to deny another person their voting rights to include candidates also.

Stallings is trying to change the law after an incident that occurred during the senate race when supporters of A. Joe Canada Jr. asked Stallings to "quietly withdraw" from the race after a beer-drinking incident.

The incident occurred after Stallings was campaigning door-to-door on a hot humid day on Labor Day weekend. He opened a can of beer while riding as a passenger in a car when he was spotted by De Anna Cobb and her eight-year-old son.

Parks are for everyone to enjoy

Seashore State Park has been declared off limits by state officials to next month's Shamrock Marathon.

Beginning this year, a little-known policy that dates back to the 1960's has been revived that prohibits "competitive organizations or team sports" in the park.

State officials blame runners and about one million visitors for damaging and littering the 2,770-acre state park. The officials said trampled plants and trash that people leave in the park endanger its future, which is already afflicted by encroaching development.

The Shamrock Marathon, which is held in March, began in 1973 as a hometown event. In the past few years, 1,500 to 2,000 runners from 40 states have raced along the Oceanfront and through Seashore State Park.

Last year, the event was expanded to the Shamrock Sports Fest, including not only the race but seminars on exercise and health along with other competitions.

In 1973, the 26.2 mile race included a four mile stretch through the park. In the past several years, it has expanded to seven miles.

State Parks Commissioner Ronald D. Sutton made the decision to prohibit the race. Gov. Baliles is said to support the decision.

The first crackdown attempt banned Girl Scouts from Camp Linkhorn, which is on the park's edge. After a public outcry, the Girl Scout tradition was restored which dated back to 1954.

Mass mailing is a wise decision

Mayor Robert G. Jones, in a mass mailing, is seeking advice from 1,700 supporters to decide if he should run for re-election.

His "Dear Friend" letters ask for support in varying ways on a return postcard. He has not set a numerical goal for money or people, although, he said that if 20 to 25 percent of the cards are not returned he would seriously reassess what his support base really is.

Public health demands designated smoking areas

Editor:

A 1987 survey of the Waynesboro area conducted by the Waynesboro League of Women Voters reveals that 88.2 percent favor some restrictions on smoking in enclosed public places. 90 percent favor separate sections for smokers and nonsmokers in restaurants. 72.5 percent say they are adversely affected physically by inhaling secondhand smoke. (A copy of the survey is available in Del. Bernard Cohen's office.)

In a 1987 Gallup poll conducted for the National Restaurant Association, 62 percent of all adults surveyed, including smokers and nonsmokers, preferred the no-smoking section of restaurants.

In a 1987 Gallup poll conducted for the American Lung Association, two thirds of all Americans, including a strong majority of current smokers, now prefer separate no-smokers sections in both hotels and motels. In that same poll, 74 percent of both smokers and nonsmokers favor having separate sections in restaurants. Only 8 percent of the adult population, which includes 13 percent of all smokers, favors no restrictions on smoking.

More than one third of the nation's workplaces now have restrictions on smoking, according to the Bureau of National Affairs. Workplace smoking restrictions have increased 50 percent in just one year.

The Virginia Clean Indoor Air Act would require businesses to set up policies restricting smoking to designated areas. It would require restaurants to set aside a no-smoking section. In other words, it would require, for public health reasons, what the public wants, and what perceptive business executives are already doing.

For the majority of Virginians who suffer from allergies, asthma attacks, migraine headaches and other short-range health effects triggered by secondhand smoking, as well as those who want to protect themselves and their children against the long-range life-threatening diseases such as cancers, respiratory problems, and heart diseases related to secondhand smoking, the Virginia Clean Indoor Air Act holds a promise of better health. This bill is supported by the Virginia Group to Alleviate Smoking in Public, the Virginia Society of Respiratory Therapy, the Virginia Interagency Council on Smoking or Health, the Virginia divisions of the American Cancer Society, American Heart Association, and American Lung Association.

The tobacco industry's argument that designated smoking areas will harm them is as ridiculous as imagining that designated driving areas hurts the automobile industry. Smoking can easily be accomplished in designated smoking areas. Public health demands it.

Off the Record

It's just a counting game

"I can count to one hundred," my nephew said.

That's what started the ex-cruciating hours that were to follow. I was having a wonderful day. The sun was shining. It felt like spring. I was in a great mood. I had no important plans, nothing to do but enjoy the day. Then this.

I just had to start teasing the kid. Nope. I couldn't keep my mouth shut. I just had to egg the kid on. "Now, first-graders can't count that high," I said, at the time not knowing what I just set myself up for. Insert foot. There are just some things that you don't say to a first-grader and expect to get away with it. That was one of them.

"Now, first-graders can't count that high," I said, at the time not knowing what I just set myself up for.

Of course he started proving to me that, yes, indeed first-graders can count up to one hundred.

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight . . ." he began.

"I believe you," I begged. My mother told me not to tease little kids. Now, I know why. I guess years of experience know better.

"nine, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, twenty-nine," he sang.

"30!" he bellowed. "31, 32, 33 . . ."

"That's pretty good," I said and tried to slink into the kitchen.

By this time I was in the kitchen pouring myself a glass of ice tea, hoping he would give up. For some reason I knew I couldn't escape. I could still hear him he was getting closer.

"37, 38, thirty-nine," he sang.

"40!" he bellowed. It was too late. He was in the kitchen.

"41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, forty-nine," he sang.

"50!" he bellowed. "51, 52, 53, 54 . . ."

I knew I was in for the duration on this one. So I began thinking about what I should do. "Maybe I should wash my car," I thought. "Now, it's not dirty enough. Hmm . . . What else could I do?"

I could hear a faint little voice behind me, "55, 56, 57 . . ."

"I'm never having kids," I thought.

"58, fifty-nine," he sang.

"60!" he bellowed. "61, 62, 63 . . ."

I couldn't resist. I just had to. It just came out of my mouth faster than I could think. "42, 37, 58, 19," I said jokingly.

"You messed me up," he said. "Now I have to start over."

"No. No," I begged. "You were on 99, honestly."

No such luck.

"One, two, three, four five . . ." he began again.

I turned on the T.V. and sat down. I knew I was going to be there awhile. I started thinking about his teacher. At this point I would have liked to have slapped her happy. "What a stupid thing to teach a kid," I thought. "Why not just teach him how to count to one thousand. I have nothing better to do."

"37, 38, thirty-nine," he sang.

"40!" he bellowed. "41, 42, 43 . . ."

I started doing my laundry. He followed me up the steps.

"41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46 . . ." he continued. I retrieved the basket of dirty clothes. "47, 48, forty-nine," he sang.

"50!" he bellowed. And then back down the steps. "51, 52, 53 . . ."

The future of our schools: The Literacy Passport

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

This week's article is written by Claire Polley, VBEA vice-president.

In October, 1986, the Report of the Governor's Commission on Excellence in Education issued "Excellence in Education: A Plan for Virginia's Future." The commission has been charged by Gov. Baliles to make recommendations for specific actions to make Virginia one of the nation's top states in the quality of education that it offers.

Many of the recommendations were considered controversial but were designed to "...put Virginia in the first rank of states in the quality of education...not because of pride, but for the well-being of all Virginians--and yes, because of jobs." The second of 21 recommendations called for literacy tests in reading, writing, and arithmetic for all student in grade six, and to award a literacy passport to those who pass. Remediation, including summer school, would be provided for students who fail, and tests shall be repeated for these students in grade seven and, if necessary, in grade eight. Passing the test will be required for promotion to grade nine.

The commission's report described the literacy passport as "a significant step in a student's education and affirms that the student is prepared for success at the more demanding level of secondary education." The members of the commission stressed that the passport "should be a document worthy of the achievement that it represents and awarded in school and community which mark its importance."

In Virginia Beach, as in other communities, it is not yet clear what these recommendations and state mandates will cost and how they will be implemented. In his fine State of the Division Report, Dr. Melvin recognized the importance of the mandate and alerted school members that Standard E will have budget implications "for programs leading to test administration in the sixth grade, junior high school remediation programs, and high school alternative programs."

Dr. Melvin and his staff want to do the finest job possible for the students of Virginia Beach. It is important that members of the community get behind the schools' effort and provide the necessary monies to be in compliance with state mandates.

The evidence obtained by the Governor's Commission on Excellence should be of concern to all Virginians and offer the motivation to do whatever is necessary to realistically fund the schools. The commission found that 25 percent of ninth-grade students do not graduate from high school. One of five Virginia adults over age 25 has completed eight years of school or less -- that is three-quarters of a million of Virginia's citizens who may be functionally illiterate in today's society.

The commission offered this explanation: "The differences in dollars school divisions spend for education are as great as the difference in student achievement. One division spends more than two and one-half times more than another -- $5,400 vs $2,000. Whereas local taxes in one school division raise one dollar out of five spent for education, another division raises four of every five dollars from its own taxes."

The commission's recommendation for a literacy passport program and all that it entails is expensive but so is illiteracy. "If Virginia could reduce by one-half the number of the students who are not promoted to the next grade, and if only one-half of the $3,000 it costs to teach each student in the same grade could be saved, Virginia taxpayers would save more than $50,000 each year." The attention that Virginia Beach will pay to the problems of low educational achievement, illiteracy, and dropout rates will depend on the budgetary constraints placed on it by City Council. The VBEA believes that the citizens want and deserve a great school system and are willing to pay the price.

When the commission offered its recommendations to the governor, and the State Board of Education acted upon them and mandated changes, they knew that for these recommendations to be effective, citizens must understand the value of a sound education and be willing to pay for it. The recommendations also require that goals for implementation toward excellence must be shared by not only educators, but also by government and legislative leaders at every level.

Boldness and commitment are called for in budgetary planning and analysis. The Literacy Passport Program is just one of the several new state mandates which will require additional personnel and resources. The program will mandate major budget expenditures.

If Virginia Beach is to continue to offer a top-notch educational program, the budget needs to be fully funded, and if necessary, additional revenue raised to meet educational needs. The future of our school system depends on it.

Displaying house numbers saves valuable time

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Did you know that it is a city regulation that home and business owners must display their street address numbers. The numbers must be easily observed from the street. It is also permissible to display the numbers on the street curb.

It is very difficult for the police, fire and rescue workers to find house numbers if it is after dark, raining or there are no numbers displayed at all. Another problem is that home owners use very small numbers or they purchase the spelled out version, for example, nine hundred fifty five instead of 955. The emergency workers have enough on their mind than trying to take the extra glance looking for the right house number.

Please place the numbers near the front door and also on the mailbox at the street. Please use large numbers and if you call for help, stand out in the yard and flag down the emergency workers if it's during the day. If at night, flash your outside light on and off when you see them approaching.

Don't paint the numbers the same color as the rest of the house. If trees or shrubs block the view of the numbers from the street, place the numbers on the garage door or trim the shrubs. In an emergency, those numbers on your neighbor's house and your house will save valuable time in help arriving.

Please help your professional firefighters find those numbers. Display them in areas visible from the street and use large bold numbers. And when you call for help, go out and flag them down, every second counts.

Test your smoke detectors and think fire safety.

After I got my laundry in the machine I decided it was lunchtime. I figured if I fed him maybe he would stop. No such luck, he ignored his peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

"54, 55, 56, 57, 58, fifty-nine," he sang.

"60!" he bellowed. "61, 62, 63..."

"But I even cut the crust off," I begged. "64, 65, 66, 67, 68, sixty-nine," he sang.

"70!" he bellowed. "71, 72, 73..."

"I know Virginia Beach is suppose to have good schools," I thought. "But this is ridiculous."

"74, 75, 76, 77, 78, seventy-nine," he sang.

"80!" he bellowed. "81, 82, 83, 84..."

I was starting to get a headache. "Aren't you hungry from all that counting," I asked.

He shook his head, "no."

"85, 86, 87, 88 eighty-nine," he sang.

"90!" he bellowed. "91, 92, 93, 94..."

He was in the last stretch. My headache was starting to go away. My mood was starting to pick up. "95, 96, 97, 98, ninety-nine," he sang proudly.

"100!"

"What comes next?" I asked.

Student Exchange Program is seeking host families

ASSE International Student Exchange Program (ASSE) is seeking Virginia Beach families to host boys and girls from Scandinavia, France, Spain, Germany, Holland, Great Britain, Switzerland, Japan, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, 15 to 18 years of age, coming to this area for the upcoming high school year.

These personable and academically select exchange students are bright, curious and anxious to learn about this country through living as part of a family, attending high school and sharing their own culture and language with their newly adopted host family.

The students are fluent in English and are sponsored by ASSE, a nonprofit, public benefit organization, affiliated with the Swedish and Finnish Departments of Education. ASSE also cooperates with the Canadian Provincial Ministries of Education and is approved by the Australian and New Zealand Departments of Education.

The exchange students arrive from their home country shortly before school begins and return at the end of the school year. Each ASSE student is fully insured, brings his or her own personal spending money and expects to bear his or her share of household responsibilities, as well as being included in normal family activities and lifestyle.

The students are well screened and qualified by ASSE. Families may select the youngster of their choice from extensive student applications, family photos and biographical essays. Students and families are encouraged to begin corresponding prior to the student's arrival.

ASSE is also seeking local high school students to become ASSE exchange students abroad. Students should be between 15 and 18 years old and interested in living with a host family, attending school and learning about the lands and people of Scandinavia, France, Spain, Germany, Holland, Britain, Switzerland, Canada, Australia or New Zealand.

Students should have a good academic record and desire to experience another culture and language through living with a warm and giving volunteer family. Academic year and shorter term summer vacation programs are available.

Persons interested in obtaining more information about becoming a host family or becoming a student abroad should contact ASSE's local representative: Bob and Jeannie Rider, 520 Kings Grove Drive, Virginia Beach, Va. 23452, or call 340-4562.

DAR honor three local students

At the January meeting of the Lynnhaven Parish Chapter National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, held at the historic Francis Land House, the members honored three local high school seniors as DAR Good Citizens.

The DAR Good Citizen program began in 1934 and recognizes high school seniors for outstanding qualities of leadership, dependability, service and patriotism.

Mrs. Robert McCrary, regent and Mrs. Rice M. Youell presented the Good Citizen pin and a Bicentennial of the Constitution Ratification calendar to David S. Burnett of Kempville High School, Patricia A. Coley of Tabernacle Baptist School and Holly Jean Daniels of Green Run High School.

David, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Burnett, Jr., has been an SCA representative for four years, a member of the National Honor Society, vice-president of the German Club and a member of the Senior Class Council and Inter-Club Council. He plans to major in Business Administration. David's father received the DAR Good Citizens award as a high school senior.

Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy D. Coley, is active in speech, drama, choir, Glee Club and a member of the American Honor Society, Bible Quiz Team, Future Teachers of America and the Math Club. Her goal is to earn a master's degree in education.

Holly Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Daniels, has been SCA representative for four years, a member of the French Club, International Thespian Society, Senior Senate and Girls State. She was Homecoming Queen and co-captain and most valuable player in Field Hockey in 1987. Her future plans include college.

Smoldering ashes damage garbage truck

A $100,000 Virginia Beach refuse collection vehicle was almost damaged Thursday due to the careless disposal of fireplace ashes.

"Two things are happening that the public needs to be aware of," said Wade Kyle, administrator of the Waste Management Division of the Public Works Department for the city, in a press release. "First, people are putting hot ashes into the new automated containers we distributed, which are being burned, as a result. Secondly, the smoldering ashes are catching trash inside the truck on fire, endangering the vehicle and our employees!"

Kyle cited the case of a homeowner who recently threw smoldering ashes in a trash can which was placed next to the family pick-up truck. The result was not only the loss of trash can, but resulted in the loss of the $9,000 pick-up truck, as well.

Kyle offered the following tips to Virginia Beach residents. Fireplace ashes are often still smoldering even when they appear cooled. Ashes should therefore be left in the fireplace for several days. They can then be placed in a metal container and left to cool for several days. The container should be set on concrete, not wood, as even the hot metal bottom of a container can start a fire. The ashes should then be dumped thoroughly before being thrown out.

"Every year a couple of garbage loads catch on fire," said Kyle. "This year we've been lucky, but this was a close call! Ashes can smolder a long time and it's not worth taking the chance of losing your vehicle or even worse, your home."

Street numbers must be displayed

Home and business owners are reminded that city of Virginia Beach regulations require prominent display of street address numbers.

House and commercial building numbers must be easily observable from the street. In addition to displaying the number near the building, it is permissible to display the number on the street curb. Curb numbers must be black, in block form, and the numeral should be four inches high and ¾ inch in width, with less than two inches of space between numerals.

Failure to display easily observable building numbers is a misdemeanor, and each day that a violation continues after conviction constitutes a separate offense. The display of an incorrect number is also a misdemeanor.

For more information, residents may call the Virginia Beach Police Department at 427-4097.

Fishermen's Forum

The Virginia Sport Fisherman's Forum will be held Saturday, Feb. 13 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Pavilion Convention Center.

Aimed at providing coastal fishing enthusiasts with an opportunity to get more involved in major issues affecting their fishing activity, the forum runs concurrent with the Mid-Atlantic Sports and Boat Show. The event is annually coordinated by the Sea Grant Marine Advisory Services program at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) of the College of William and Mary.

Responding to recent local and national attention on a federal saltwater fishing license proposal, the forum agenda has been expanded to include the license topic. Mr. Richard Christian, Research Specialist with the Sport Fishing Institute (SFI) in Washington, D.C., will provide an update on what the federal legislative proposal seeks to accomplish and SFI's position on the matter.

Introduced by Congressman Don Young of Alaska, House Bill 3341, entitled "Fisheries Research Funding Act of 1987," would impose a $15 annual license fee on saltwater recreational fishermen and charter boat captains. The proposal would also impose a $45 fee on commercial harvesting and processing vessels. The funds would be used strictly for fisheries research, and would be distributed among regional fishery management councils, fisheries commissions, and the federal National Marine Fisheries Service.

Additional topics to be addressed by the forum include: the offshore dumping issue; cooperative state-federal efforts to develop a bluefish fishery management plan; findings from recent striped bass tagging studies and juvenile fish surveys; and the fishery enforcement program of the Virginia Marine Resources Commission.

Fishermen attending the forum will also have the opportunity to learn bait rigging and fishing tips. Captain Don White, fishing out of the Rudee Inlet Fishing Center, will conduct a practical session on rigging and working marlin baits. Mr. Claude Bain, III, recently appointed director of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament, will provide an update on the tournament and also offer tips on how to put Spanish mackerel in the cooler.

To wrap up the sessions, an extraordinary fishing story will be shared with attendees. Greg and Robert Bell of Alexandria, along with their fishing partner Pete Ambrose of Wachapreague, will relive their fishing adventure this past August while wreck fishing off Virginia's Eastern Shore. Their recently certified International Gamefish Association all-tackle world record tautog will be on display during the session. The 24-pound fish was boated simultaneously with a citation sea bass on the same line on a second hook.

A registration fee of $1 will be charged at the door to help cover forum expenses. The fee entitles attendees to participate in door prize drawings during the day.

WHY IS A HOME EQUITY LOAN A GOOD IDEA? BRILLIANT

1. New Legislation

Congress has just passed a new tax law which increases the allowable interest deduction for Home Equity Loans. Homeowners can now deduct all interest paid on a Home Equity Loan of $100,000 or less, provided the loan does not exceed the fair market value of the house minus the first mortgage balance.*

2. Tax Deductible Interest

The increased deductibility of Home Equity Loan interest is important, because federal law is now rapidly reducing the deductibility of all other consumer loan interest. Homeowners who wish to retain their interest deductions should obtain a Home Equity Loan.

3. Low Rates

For a limited time, you can select a rate as low as 9.99% Annual Percentage Rate (APR) on 5-year, fixed-rate loans and a rate as low as 10.99% APR on 10-year loans.

LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS

| Amount Financed | 9.99% Fixed Rate 5-Year Term | 10.99% Fixed Rate 10-Year Term |
|-----------------|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| $ 5,000 | $108.21 | — |
| $10,000 | $212.42 | $137.69 |
| $15,000 | $318.63 | $206.54 |
| $20,000 | $424.84 | $275.38 |

4. No Closing Costs

Or, if you prefer, you can select First Virginia's standard fixed-rate Home Equity Loan and take advantage of our NO CLOSING COSTS offer on fixed-rate Home Equity Loans of $10,000 or more. This could enable you to save $300, $600 or more! (Limited time offer)

5. Fast Approval

In most cases, we'll say "Yes" within five business days. So, act now and save your interest deduction with a Home Equity Loan from First Virginia.

*If you refinanced your first mortgage after October 13, 1987, certain restrictions apply. Please contact your tax advisor.

published in the Journal of the American Medical Association and the American Journal of Surgery. His first scientific paper was published in 1944 and appeared in the Virginia Medical Monthly.

Since his election in 1978 to the AMA Board of Trustees, he has served various positions. He was chairman from 1985-86, vice-chairman from 1983-85, and secretary-treasurer of the association and secretary of the board from 1980-83. He was also appointed an AMA Commissioner to the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals in 1981 until 1986.

Hotchkiss has been president of AMA since June.

"It is an achievement that one appreciates to be recognized by his peers in this way," he said. "It is not much different than a board position, although it is more time consuming."

"You don't move into this position without being involved with the American Medical Association for a number of years," Hotchkiss continued.

Stallings

The first letter sent to Stallings stated that Cobb's son was shocked to see a Senate candidate drink while being driven. Cobb stated that it was hardly the proper image to convey.

After the letter Stallings made a 45 minute visit to the Cobb home to apologize. Four days after the visit, Stallings received a second letter.

The letter stated "We hope it will not be necessary to embarrass you publicly," and asked him to "quietly withdraw."

Stallings called the state police and had them investigate. He said the actions violated the state law preventing anyone from conspiring to deny another person their voting rights.

Stallings said that before sending the letter, Jean Cobb, the grandmother of the boy, talked to Canada's wife and campaign manager. The Canada camp denied involvement.

A state police special agent investigated the incident but in December, state officials told Stallings there was no illegal activity and that the law only provided for voters and not candidates.

The bill that Stallings initiated was passed by the Senate's Privileges and Election Committee but the full Senate will vote on the bill next week.

Let's hope it passes. Political blackmail has gone too far. The mudslinging has to stop somewhere. Everyone has made one mistake in their life. Stallings apologized for the incident and agreed that it wasn't the proper image to convey. There is no need to drag someone's name through the mud because of one small incident.

A mockery is being made of the political system. Running for a political office, presently, is like opening your private life to a fine-tooth comb. Some things just aren't important enough to risk a person's political future. — V.A.O.

Seashore

Race sponsors say that the decision will ruin a tradition. Charlie George, executive director of Tidewater Striders, a race sponsor, said that the race was unique because it runs through a park and other marathons don't.

The state officials, who are concerned about the overuse and defiling of the park, should consider that parks are developed for people to use.

Littering is not condoned but a stricter policy on litter laws could be enforced in the park rather than banning groups from using it altogether.

First it's picking on little Girl Scouts, then runners, what's next? Senior citizens feeding the birds?

If the race brings between 1,500 and 2,000 runners from 40 different states to the resort city, it should be looked at as an economic advantage. The added tourists coming to the city in March, a not so popular month for the tourist industry, is beneficial for Virginia Beach and will bring in more tourism.

Seashore Park should be for all to enjoy. — V.A.O.

Mailing

Jones personally paid $374 for postage and $50 for printing the 1,700 letters. Respondents must pay their own postage to return the postcards.

Jones must decide whether to run by Feb. 26, the deadline for council incumbents to declare their mayoral candidacy.

Since this is Virginia Beach's first mayoral election, Jones made a smart move on his part. He said that it could possibly cost $200,000 to run a "credible campaign" for mayor.

The mailings will allow him to know how he stands for re-election before taking the chance of investing money into a campaign that he could, possibly, lose.

The response from the mailings will alleviate any doubts that Jones may have about running for a second term, by public consensus, instead of council appointment — V.A.O.

Autocross set for Pungo Fairgrounds

Tidewater Sports Car Club (TSCC) will conduct the second autocross of its three-event 1988 Winter Series on Sunday, Feb. 21, at the Pungo Fairgrounds.

The site of the competition — entitled "Henry Ford's Revenge" (subtitled the "Perilous Pungo Pylon Parade") — is near Indian River and Princess Anne Roads.

The club is hoping to see a repeat of the very successful series and year opener, held recently in Pungo. That event, which marked the beginning of TSCC's 35th year of motorsport activities, drew 90 competitors. Autocrossers, both experienced and novice hailed from Washington, D.C., Maryland, Richmond, Va., North Carolina, as well as throughout the Tidewater area.

Registration for the event will open at 9 a.m., with the first car starting at 10 a.m. The entry fee is $12. Entry in the autocross is open to all licensed drivers with vehicles able to pass a safety and technical inspection.

An autocross is a timed competition in which drivers compete, one car at a time against the clock, by driving through a prescribed closed course made up of rubber traffic pylons. It is a thorough test of a driver's skill, timing and "feel" for the car, as well as a test of the car's handling through a variety of left and right-hand turns, and straight sections. Autocross cars range from daily back-and-fourth-to-work vehicles in showroom stock condition, to fully race-prepared formula, sedan, and sports cars.

Cars will be classed according to performance modifications made; entrants will compete in one of nearly 20 classes. Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) 1988 SOLO II rules will govern the classing in the four major categories; stock, street-prepared, prepared, and modified.

Series class trophies will be based on points earned for each event. Entrants must compete in at least two of the three events to qualify for a series trophy.

Leading his A-Modified class, as well as all competitors, with the fastest time of the January autocross, is Jim Fry of Virginia Beach. He and his Phase 1 Machine Royale RP-18A outdistanced the field in the first event by five seconds. That was the first competitive test of his newly rebuilt Formula Super-Vee engine.

Exhaust suppression is required for all cars competing before noon. No alcoholic beverages are allowed at the event.

For additional information, and to pre-register for the autocross, call event official and TSCC President Mark Wilson at 622-2296.

Chamber supports HOV elimination; post-Labor Day opening of schools

Representatives of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce were in Richmond to support two proposals pending in the 1988 Virginia General Assembly, according to a Chamber-issued press release.

Several interested chamber members joined the chamber's staff lobbyist in the state capital to push for the temporary elimination of HOV lanes on Route 44/1-264, and to support the post-Labor Day opening of public schools.

The chamber's Board of Directors passed resolutions recently in support of the two proposals. In a third vote, the executive committee called state fund to develop a graduate center — operated jointly by Old Dominion and Norfolk State Universities — in Virginia Beach.

The chamber is also still seeking support for the chamber's initial legislative package, co-sponsored with the Virginia Peninsula Chamber, which details the chambers' position on eight issues of regional importance.

terrible thing was going to happen a certain day and nothing happened. He said he was told the same thing last year which makes the third year in a row rumors have circulated.

The difference in the magnitude of the rumors then and now, he said, is the radio station. "It's certainly a black mark on the city and school." He said that it is a crime that some people have been advised not to buy property in the neighborhood because of the school when some of the best staff people are at the school.

He said, however, that he could not recall an incident involving a gun previously.

He maintained that the race has no adverse impact on the park as claimed by the State, and that the day after the race "you would not know we were there."

Bocrie said he sees bikers and loose dogs that do more damage. Councilman John A. Baum noted that a lot of people are running at one time (Over 2,000 entered the race last year.)

Bocrie also said that vehicles are not taken into the park.

Proposed by Councilwoman Reba McClanan, the resolution was adopted by a vote of 9-2 with Councilman John A. Baum and John D. Moss dissenting.

Weaving Yarns at Plaza Junior High

Storyteller Carolyn Prattis tells Plaza Junior High drama students the story of a poor man and a lost purse of gold coins. King's Grand posters provide healthy reminder Patients using the exercise room of the Virginia Beach General Hospital Health Education Center will see some reassuring messages on posters prepared by the King's Grant Elementary School health club. Sixth graders Tony Charriere (left) and Jennifer Hitchcock hung the posters in December with the help of exercise physiologist Allen Bostlan.

The hospital is King's Grant Elementary's Adopt-A-School partner; the health club posters were prepared after school nurse Elaine Daywalt, sponsor of the club, introduced a variety of health topics during club meetings. Hospital officials will return the favor by providing health experts to speak at future club meetings. Photo by Gary Fullerton

Three local education majors sign teaching contract

Nine of Longwood College's most promising education majors including three Virginia Beach residents, will not be job hunting when they graduate next May. They have already signed contracts with the city of Chesapeake. Theresa Labyak, Jane Fuqua, and Claye Conkwright are among 12 Longwood seniors who have been offered teaching positions through Chesapeake Public Schools' Career Commitment Program.

Nine have signed contracts and three others decided not to sign with the Chesapeake schools because of personal or career plans in other areas of the state.

Corcoran Auto does honest work

"We're not looking to rip people off," said Alan Botelho, part owner of Corcoran Auto Maintenance. "Mechanics have a bad reputation. We want to do honest work."

Botelho and Rick Corcoran are partners of Corcoran Auto which has been open for six months. The two solo employees do bumper-to-bumper work on foreign and domestic cars, servicing wholesalers, referrals, and off-the-street customers.

Both have worked for dealerships in the past and as Botelho put it, "we were tired of working for others."

"We can give people better service," he said. "We're knowledgeable enough."

"They want the company to grow. They average 10 cars a day."

"We're picking up more and more each month," he said. "By summer we should have a larger shop."

McClanan vows to push for more beach

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

A General Assembly Bill, sponsored by Virginia Beach Delegates Glenn B. McClanan, Harry R. Purkey and Robert Tata, which would have allowed public access to the Camp Pendleton beach, has been washed out.

McClanan, however, vows to re-introduce the bill next year.

"It provides vitally needed oceanfront recreation. We are short state park facilities where it is most needed," he said.

The bill never made it to the House. It was killed in the Conservation and Natural Resource committee, where it was voted down 15-1.

An alternate bill, sponsored by Virginia Beach Senator Clarence A. Holland, is pending and endorses continued military control of Camp Pendleton.

Holland's legislation has passed in the Senate and is presently pending a decision in the House Rules Committee.

McClanan said, "My bill is legislation; Holland's is a resolution sponsored by the governor."

McClanan said that "If the resolution passes it will make it

Bill to open Pendleton beach denied more difficult," to pass next year.

If McClanan's bill had passed it would have allowed the Virginia Division of Parks and Recreation to take over the quarter-mile beach. It is now run by the state Department of Military Affairs.

McClanan's plan for the 44 acres included a public park with ballfields, picnic areas, boating, fishing and swimming. He argues that the National Guard does not need all the prime oceanfront space.

Holland, who supports military control of the base, was unavailable for comment.

Last week the Virginia Beach City Council would not support McClanan's bill. They agreed to stay neutral while the city staff negotiated with the state to buy 364 acres of state-owned land at Camp Pendleton. The Council feared that it would jeopardize the current land negotiations at the base.

Virginia Beach has been negotiating with the state to buy the acreage outside the base's main fence, since June when the state informed the city that the land would be sold. The state suggested the city could buy the land at "fair market value."

City officials were infuriated because the city already rents the majority of the property and has built a school, golf course, tennis center and fire training center on the land.

City officials are not discussing the details of the negotiations or say when the deal is expected to be closed.

In the meantime, McClanan plans on pushing the bill through next year. "It's very important," he said.

More minuses than pluses; Baum going back to farming

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

After 16 years as Blackwater Borough councilman, John Baum is politely bowing out of the political arena.

"The main thing is that the job is getting to be full-time and it's interfering with farming," he said. "With farming you work long hours and it's getting to be too much."

"I have to think of my own retirement plans," Baum said on the day he was celebrating his 61st birthday.

The senior member and veteran politician of the Virginia Beach Council announced his plans to not seek re-election for a fifth term at last Monday's council meeting. He will leave his seat on June 30.

"I want my constituents to know a political plum is available," he said at the meeting, in his characteristic dry-wit manner.

Baum doubts that he will re-enter politics in the future.

"I'm going to devote more time to farming," he said. "I'll be busy."

Baum said that he carefully contemplated his decision. "It took time, I thought about it last Fall. I added up the pluses and minuses. I couldn't think of enough pluses."

"I met a lot of good people that I wouldn't of otherwise met," he added. "I worked for a long time on floodways, for 12 years, in conservation and agriculture. It's important to represent. It has a terrific affect on farming. I hate to leave because of those reasons."

Baum, who has an engineering degree from Virginia Tech, has added his expertise of soil, drainage and other engineering ideas to help solve agricultural problems.

Target areas may be put in city's CIP

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Infrastructure improvements in target neighborhoods which historically have been limited to the availability of Community Development (Federal) funds, may be worked into the city's Capital Improvement Program (CIP) in the future.

Although Community Development funds have been allocated to the city since 1978 to provide water, sewer and streets in 12 target areas, only two of the projects have been completed. The remaining communities, designated for assistance because they have low-income residents, are at various stages of improvement and with federal funds diminishing apparently are not expected to be completed without help from the city.

Mayor Robert G. Jones told target neighborhood residents last week, "We feel this thing has gone on long enough. You people have waited long enough. (The improvements) have to be worked into the CIP."

Councilman Robert V. Fentress added that Council should make a strong recommendation to put all the target areas in the CIP. This has been going on for years."

Jones said that some representatives of the target areas already have met with City Manager

Aubrey V. Watts Jr. who has made a verbal commitment to get the communities in the CIP.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley added that the city has "lots of places that don't have these improvements." She said she would like to see such areas identified city wide. "We need to do what we're talking about city-wide."

Councilman John L. Perry said the 13 years in the target neighborhoods have been years of "slipping and sliding."

"Where did the block grants go?" he asked.

At last Monday's council meeting Jones sponsored

Oberndorf plans to "earn" office; campaign won't top $200,000 mark

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

Meyera Oberndorf, who is the first announced mayoral candidate for Virginia Beach, said that her campaign costs will not run into the $200,000 mark that Mayor Robert G. Jones has said it may cost to run a "credible" campaign for the mayor seat.

"It won't for Meyera Oberndorf," she said. "She doesn't raise huge sums of money and as I said before I want to earn the office."

Although she was unsure of what her campaign will cost, she said, "Historically I do not raise huge sums of money."

Fundraisers are expected to begin next month, according to a report made by Roger L. Ober-

She also said the election by the public is going to be beneficial to the mayoral elections. In the past the mayor was appointed by the City Council.

"Libraries provide an important function" — Martha Sims

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

When Martha J. Sims began her career as director of the Department of Public Libraries 12 years ago the Library Administration Office, General Services, the Department of Public Works, the Police Department and the Clerks Office were on the same floor of the City Hall Building.

At the time, Sims managed four area libraries at Oceanfront, Bayside, Windsor Woods and Kempsville.

"I've seen Virginia Beach grow into a professional and growing city government from adolescence," she said. "It was less formal (12 years ago)."

"I look back to the early times of my career, it's good to reminisce about the good old days but there is a lot of positive to say about it now," she added. "It's well run, organized and professionally done. We make better decisions and do better research."

Twelve years later and under her direction, Virginia Beach has made room for five area libraries, the opening of a new 95,000 square foot Central Library, a Bookmobile, a Law Library, and Municipal Library.

Times have changed but the work isn't done yet, even after the grand opening of Virginia Beach's largest library.

"It was an extremely exciting day. The response was overwhelming. We expected a large crowd but we never envisioned the crowd that was there," she said. "It hasn't leveled off yet."

"I like to see the long-term project actually come alive. I

"Virginia Beach is an exciting city to work for. It's especially exciting to work in the library department." — Martha J. Sims enjoyed the five-year process of the Central Library going from vision to reality," she added.

Presently, Sims is working on a new Kempsville Library.

"The 21,000 square-foot facility will be replacing the old Kempsville Library," she said.

"We'll be right next door. We're greatly expanding the building."

"We're having meetings on the interior layout of the building. It should be concluding soon," she continued.

"The Central Library is certainly one of a kind but we'll be featuring the same systems furniture in the Kempsville Library."

"Systems" furniture is easily reconfigured and can be added to. It allows for more flexible and modular furnishings.

The interior design of the Central Library alone entailed two years of weekly and biweekly meetings.

A good portion of Sims' time is spent in meetings of various types including planning sessions, community and civic league meetings and budget meetings.

As director, she not only manages the five area libraries, and the Central Library but she also is involved with such things as the Arts and Humanities Commission, budget hearings and financing certain projects.

The last few days she has spent in meetings with division heads who were providing data for the library budget, which will be presented to the City Manager and his office.

Presently, the Department of Public Libraries operate on a $6.6 million budget for the five area libraries, Central Library, bookmobile, Law Library, and Municipal Library.

"Virginia Beach has been generous to the library system," Sims said.

Virginia Beach is an exciting city to work for. It's especially exciting to work in the library department."

In preparing for the department's budget, Sims talks to other library directors across the state to gain knowledge of their experience.

Runaway election costs

The best things in life are free, so the song goes. But in politics that doesn't apply. It takes enormous campaign contributions to win an election and it's no guarantee you get the best candidate. More money than not, you get the one with the most money.

The huge sums, despite some obsolete claims that the dollars come in crumpled bills from the man in the street, are raised from the wealthy few. It is estimated that 90 percent of political funds are donated by 1 percent of the population.

And don't kid yourself about the "no strings attached" to these contributions. There is always a string attached. It may not be a black string, but it's a string, and some day it's going to get pulled.

With this in mind, Gov. Jerry Baliles has been calling for a legislative study of the spiraling cost of Virginia political campaigns. Reform of Virginia's campaign laws is certainly in order. New steps are clearly required to reduce the importance of special interests.

It comes as no great surprise that special interests (that is, those individuals, companies, unions and other groups who hope to influence legislation) are the largest cash providers. These are the groups that have the money and the interest — and the financial stake in the outcome of elections.

Virginia sets no limits on contributions and spending in state and local elections. Current state law does require that most donations and expenditures be reported, but there is no mechanism to audit the disclosures and no penalty, other than public exposure, for failing to file or filing inaccurately.

Campaign inflation is becoming a scandal. In 1987, state senate candidates in 19 contested districts spend an average $111,000 — a massive jump from 1983's average $38,600. In the lavish Henrico County race between incumbent William Parker and challenger Eddy Dalton, an extraordinary $1.2 million was spent.

Gov. Baliles raised a record $4.1 million in his 1985 race, with more than $250,000 of it coming from Virginia Beach developer R. G. Moore. And even friends-and-neighbors local contests are exploding. Two candidates spent $845,000 seeking a single seat on the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

Goodbye, HOV lanes

The hardly-used HOV lanes will soon be given a much needed rest from the Virginia Beach-Norfolk expressway and all the negative criticism that has surrounded the rejected car-pool lanes.

A House of Delegates committee approved a bill without debate eliminating the HOV lanes until the mid 1990's when diamond lanes on I-64 are completed.

the vote from the roads committee was 20-1 in favor of the bill.

The elimination of the unused lanes looks likely to pass the full House of Delegates. The bill has already been supported by the Senate.

If the bill slides out of the House with a stamp of approval the only barrier holding the lanes from being lifted on July 1 is a veto by Gov. Gerald Baliles.

Packing handguns instead of lunches

Not too long ago students would pack a Scooby Doo lunch box and skip off to school. Today, the students are packing handguns.

The recent troublesome incidents that erupted at Bayside Junior High School have left the parents, students and community angry and shocked that such occurrences can happen in Virginia Beach.

Two handguns were confiscated from two different 9th grade students on Feb. 2 and 4. An unloaded B-B gun was also turned in to a teacher on Feb. 5, the day the worrisome problem came to a head.

On the morning of Feb. 5, a local station broadcasted 40 of about 200 calls that it received warning of potential violence at Bayside. The first of the calls indicated there was going to be a 'beat whitey day' at the school.

While the rumors centered on racial tensions, a PTA meeting following the events focused on widespread harassment not specifically drawn by racial lines.

Dr. James E. Melvin, superintendent of schools, has said that the incidents damaged the reputation of the school and the city. He also has said that a student carrying a gun to school is not a highly unusual event and that people tend to wear rose colored glasses about how it used to be.

It is very unfortunate that the reputation of the school is damaged. But hopefully something will be done before an innocent kid gets shot.

Myths in the lore of gardening

Myths abound in the lore of gardening, clouding issues and veiling the truth. The following are some common gardening myths:

Myth — Botanical insecticides are natural products toxic to pests but harmless to other living things.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Plant-derived poisons are only sometimes less toxic to man than synthetic agricultural chemicals.

Rotenone, from the roots of derris plants, is toxic if swallowed or inhaled. Both pyrethrum and rotenone are low in toxicity to mammals yet highly toxic to fish. The yardstick for comparing acute, short-term toxicity is the LD50 or lethal dosage needed to kill fifty percent of a group of test animals (rats, rabbits, etc.). When you compare LD50 figures, the chemical insecticides malathion and sevin rank safer than nicotine sulfate, a botanical poison derived from tobacco.

No matter whether the chemical comes from a laboratory or a plant, it pays to be careful.

Myth — Fall is the best season for pruning.

This is false for several reasons. Shrubs and trees store carbohydrates (food materials) in their branches and leaves, so fall pruning can reduce their cold hardness.

Azaleas and other spring-flowering plants would bloom poorly if pruned in fall, as next year's flower buds are present at that time. Such plants are best pruned in spring right after petals fall.

Myth — The soil under oaks and pines is acidic.

This is sometimes true, sometimes false. The acidity of soil depends not only on the nature of vegetation growing on it, but also on the type of rock below. Some soils under oaks and pines are neutral or alkaline, needing no lime.

Myth — Mushrooms and toadstools sprouting in your lawn means that the soil is deficient.

In actuality, these plants are merely the above-ground growth of fungus organisms living in soil. Some fungi live on buried lumber, dead roots, or fine particles of organic matter. Others live in harmony with tree roots, assisting in the uptake of water and nutrients. A few cause plant disease. The sudden appearance of mushrooms does not mean the lawn needs lime, fertilizer or anything else. If you object to their sprouting in lawns or gardens, use a rake to dispose of them. There is no chemical control for mushrooms.

Myth — Moss growth in lawns shows a need for lime.

This is not necessarily true. Acidic conditions could be responsible for moss crowding out your grass, but so could excessive shade, poor drainage, low fertility, and a host of other causes. When conditions do not favor healthy turf, moss can take over.

Myth — When it comes to garden chemicals, if a little bit is good, a lot is better.

This myth is not only false but dangerous. Doubling or tripling

Grayest area in the east

Little Johnny sadly gazed out the front window of his home while the rain drizzled in minute beads down the cold glass. He stared into the desolate street as his head propped on his clammy clenched fists. For a moment his unhappy face turned to his mother who was simultaneously cooking dinner, ironing, sewing, mopping the floor, vacuuming, dusting, and finishing up the laundry.

Mother's hand ran through her long bangs pushing them away from her weary eyes. She thrust her hand into the laundry basket with the grace of a magician pulling a rabbit from a hat. She shouted out the stain and tossed the clothing into the worn washing machine one by one with systematic ease.

Johnny's eyes followed her every move. His face lifted slowly from his fists that were perma-glued to his cheeks, still red from the knuckle marks that held his head up. He looked up to his mother and blurted out the phrase that every mother despises. The mere thought of the phrase would allow any mother to ponder the thought of child abuse.

It came to the man like the decision to have a V-8. He should have subscribed to a respectable community and weekly newspaper that is delivered timely and stashed in the mailbox where it can be retrieved in whole, dry and crisp.

There's nothin' to do, Mom!" whined little Johnny for what seemed the 107th time that day.

His mother cringed and contemplated suicide but she sweetly offered numerous activities for the bored boy to do.

As each suggestion went through his right ear and out of his left, his upper lip curled with dissatisfaction.

"Why does it always have to rain?" the lonesome boy asked.

"Because this is Hampton Roads and it has to live up to its reputation as the grayest area on the east coast," she replied.

Johnny's irate father was making his way up the driveway from their treacherous bumper-to-bumper traffic. He was ready to kick their wet, stringy-haired, and, yes, odoriferous, little dog, only to find the remains of what was once a daily Hampton Roads newspaper. Deservingly so, the paper was lodged in the mud beside the family's front door.

It came to the man like the decision to have a V-8. He should have subscribed to a respectable community and weekly newspaper that is delivered timely and stashed in the mailbox where it can be retrieved in whole, dry and crisp.

As the spectrum expands in little Johnny's neighborhood the gray is the same throughout the somber and gray local area.

Commuters are hypnotized from the activity of their windshield wipers. Somewhat like their daily drive to work and home. The windshield wipers go back and forth, back and forth and the people in the cars go up and down, up and down.

They believe it has been raining for 40 days and 40 nights. The commuters are benevolently waiting for the second coming of either Moses or the Virginia Department of Transportation to part the Red Sea that has developed on I-64.

Gas station attendants across Hampton Roads suddenly feel a calling to become a weatherperson. They alert local motorists that the rain, inevitably, is never going to stop.

Dizzy 7-11 clerks, who have just completed the large print version of 100 Stupid Questions to Ask, are inquiring from their

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

The recent furor over the manner in which a local radio station covered the story of racial tensions at Bayside Junior High School has encouraged active debate of the role and responsibility of the media in our society. The firing of Cory H. Deitz makes it obvious that such debate became rather heated in their boardroom.

No sensible observer would question the desirability of public knowledge of what is happening in the schools. Dr. Melvin's open style of leadership discourages cover-ups. Our schools will inevitably become more open, as his style will be modeled by building level leaders. It was important that the Bayside story get out, but it could have been done in a manner less insulting to the integrity of the principal of the school, less damaging to the school's reputation, and less disruptive of the learning process.

The dedicated professional staff, the parents that care about their school, and the great majority of Bayside Junior's students who want to learn will overcome their present problems. I don't think, however, that the debate of the role and responsibility of the media should end.

Hopefully, the debate at the radio station will include consideration of programming decisions and song selection. One would not even question such decisions if their audience was an adult audience. I conjecture that the overwhelming majority of their audience is between seven and 18 years of age — it is the station of choice among my children and my eighth-grade students.

For one who can remember "I Found My Thrill on Blueberry Hill" being considered controversial and being banned in some cities, it is difficult to accept George Michael's "I Want Your Sex," which is played on the station, as appropriate for young audiences. It's difficult to handle your daughter's sing-along with the station which goes like this:

"... I want your ... sex
It's natural
It's chemical (let's do it)
It's logical
Habitual (Can we do it?)
It's sensual
But most of all ...
Sex is something we should do
Sex is something for me and you
Sex is natural — sex is good
Not everybody does it
But everybody should
Sex is natural — sex is fun
Sex is best when it's ... one on one."

It is hard for me to believe that this is the message we want our children to hear when our teen pregnancy rates and abortion rates are alarmingly high. This song sounds like an Orwellian brainwashing straight out of 1984. The station's counterpart in Richmond censored the song. Stations in other markets chose not to play it. Hopefully, they will begin to give serious consideration to how they serve or disserve our community.

I abhor censorship. I respect the ability of responsible businessmen such as Joseph D. Schwartz, general manager of the radio station. When I teach a class, I try to serve my students as I would my own children. I hope that the staffs of MTV, radio stations, and all of those organizations that address young audiences through the various media will begin to apply the same principle — base your programming decisions on what you would want for your own children.

Improper disposal of fireplace ashes continues to be problem

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Your Virginia Beach professional firefighters are still responding to a high number of blazes by the improper disposal of fireplace ashes. Please follow these few safety tips when you clean out your fireplace.

In order to keep the dust from these ashes from blowing around in your dens and living rooms, you should clean out the fire box once a week or sooner if you burn frequently. This also allows room for a good bed of coals.

Never handle the ashes when they are still warm, wait until they cool. Usually 18 hours after the fire has gone out is a good time. First get a large metal bucket and scoop shovel of some type. Clean out the coals and place them in the metal bucket. Immediately take the bucket outside to the back yard and with a garden hose or several buckets of water, pour water over the coals and ashes. By doing this, you have eliminated all thought that a hot coal is still burning within those ashes.

Do not place the bucket of ashes in the garage or on a wooden deck. Also don't pour the ashes out in the back yard near a wooden fence or where small children and pets could walk through them.

Ashes are very unpredictable. They are insulated by the powder substance so well that they might appear out when they have been known to smoulder for days after the original fire.

You should have your chimney cleaned by professional chimney sweep at least once a season and sooner if you use a wood burning stove.

I repeat, pour water on the ashes to extinguish any smouldering ashes that might still be hot. Test your smoke detectors and visit your nearest fire station and ask for a pamphlet on fire safety.

Virginia Beach Cub Scouts visit newspaper

Den Mother Betty Burton of Cub Scout Pack 419, Den 3 chaperoned her troops on a tour of the news and production rooms of The Virginia Beach Sun newspaper. She said it was a suggested project in the Cub Scout Bear Book.

Left to right, Erik Zwick, 9; Keith Bailey, 8; Doug Carr, 9; Kristopher Williams, 8; Andrew Fitzgerald, 8; and Don Burton, 8, all students at Malibu Elementary School, got a glimpse of what is involved in producing The Virginia Beach Sun.

dripping wet customers, who float across the store in their squeaky Nike tennis shoes, if it is still raining out.

And all the good little men and women who have taken their parents advice and have saved their money for a rainy day are ironically broke. Their houses have been repossessed and they were forced to move to a soggy cardboard box near the oceanfront — a Gucci cardboard box.

As the sun tries to play games and peek out for a possible day or two, the sad but familiar scenes across the overcast February skies repeat itself. Hampton Roads is, and always will be the grayest area in all of the east coast.

Sims

"I'm on the phone an awful lot," she said. "I'm never at a loss for work. There's always something to do. 'I'm not a clean desk person.'"

Sims is a graduate of Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Va., where she was an English major.

"I knew I didn't want to teach but I didn't know what else was available for an English major," she said.

Sims followed the lead of a cousin who was enrolled in a Library Science program. She then attended graduate school at the University of North Carolina and in 1969 received her master's degree.

Cub Scout Pack 419 members listen to Heidi Kettler, staff writer.

Her first full-time job was at the Richmond Public Library. In 1971 her husband, Hunter, was just out of law school and received a position as a law clerk with Judge Hoffman in Norfolk.

Sims, therefore, came from Richmond and became head of the Bayside Library managing a staff of 12 employees.

Later she became assistant director of the public libraries and in 1976 was offered the position as director.

The Sims have two children, Hunter Jr., who is nine-years-old, and Clara, who is seven-years-old.

"A lot of my spare time is devoted to catching up with the kids," she said. "As a family we love sports, skiing, playing tennis and jogging."

Sims, obviously likes to read but becomes very discouraged at the small amount of time she has available to read.

"Libraries are very important to the average citizen today, they are so bombarded with information. It's a place within the city that has accurate and unbiased information," Sims said. "Libraries provide an important function."

WHY IS A HOME EQUITY LOAN A GOOD IDEA? BRILLIANT

1. New Legislation

Congress has just passed a new tax law which increases the allowable interest deduction for Home Equity Loans. Homeowners can now deduct all interest paid on a Home Equity Loan of $100,000 or less, provided the loan does not exceed the fair market value of the house minus the first mortgage balance.*

2. Tax Deductible Interest

The increased deductibility of Home Equity Loan interest is important, because federal law is now rapidly reducing the deductibility of all other consumer loan interest. Homeowners who wish to retain their interest deductions should obtain a Home Equity Loan.

3. Low Rates

For a limited time, you can select a rate as low as 9.99% Annual Percentage Rate (APR) on 5-year, fixed-rate loans and a rate as low as 10.99% APR on 10-year loans.

LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS

| Amount Financed | 9.99% Fixed Rate 5-Year Term | 10.99% Fixed Rate 10-Year Term |
|-----------------|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| $ 5,000 | $106.21 | |
| $10,000 | $212.42 | $137.69 |
| $15,000 | $318.63 | $206.54 |
| $20,000 | $424.84 | $275.38 |

4. No Closing Costs

Or, if you prefer, you can select First Virginia's standard fixed-rate Home Equity Loan and take advantage of our NO CLOSING COSTS offer on fixed-rate Home Equity Loans of $10,000 or more. This could enable you to save $300, $600 or more! (Limited time offer)

5. Fast Approval

In most cases, we'll say "Yes" within five business days. So, act now and save your interest deduction with a Home Equity Loan from First Virginia.

*If you refinanced your first mortgage after October 13, 1987, certain restrictions apply. Please contact your tax advisor.

Karen Sawyer, sanitation for the city of Virginia Beach, inspects the North Landing Elementary School Cafeteria.

"Schools generally don't have very many violations," said Sawyer. "There isn't that pressure of preparing different kinds of food in a hurry."

Keeping kitchens spic and span

By Jeri Guarracino
Public Information Office
City of Virginia Beach

Following Karen Sawyer on her job is like watching an assembly line. As she opens a cabinet, checks the freezer temperature and looks under the sink, you get the feeling that every movement is performed in order.

Sawyer is a sanitation for the city of Virginia Beach. Five days a week, she leaves the health office at 10 a.m. to inspect restaurants, school cafeterias and daycare centers.

Ten Virginia Beach sanitarians work in the Food Services Division which is part of the Health Department. Supervisor Mike Burgess said the division is unique from other city departments because four of the inspectors are paid by the city and six are paid by the state.

The amount of time spent inspecting a restaurant varies depending on its size and number of violations. Sawyer said it can take anywhere from 30 minutes to three hours for one inspection.

Burgess explained that there are two kinds of violations: construction and habit.

"Habit violations are the most common," he explained, "these are things like food handlers not washing their hands or dishes properly. This is largely due to the high turnover rate at restaurants."

The sanitarians also teach a class at the Dome which is required for those in the food service business. Approximately 400 people per month take this class.

Sawyer enjoys her job as a sanitation because she gets to meet a diversity of people and she doesn't have to sit in an office all day.

So the next time you sit down to eat at your favorite restaurant, you can rest assured the cabinets are clean, the freezer is the proper temperature and the sink doesn't leak. The Virginia Beach sanitarians will see to that.

One-Act Festival stages new plays

By Katherine Martin

City of Virginia Beach

Aspiring playwrights constantly struggle to get new plays produced. And yet, once the play is produced and reviewed, its future looks much brighter.

The Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation Performing Arts Unit gives playwrights a chance to make that break each year.

The "Ones at Eight" one-act play festival is a competition held annually to select one-act plays for production in the Kempsville Recreation Center theatre. The plays must be previously unproduced, thirty to forty-five minutes in length, realistic, and devoid of strong language or adult situations.

Now in its eighth year, the festival began as a local affair in 1980 when eight one-act plays were produced. In 1985, the festival became a national competition. This year, forty-five scripts were submitted, twelve semi-finalists were chosen and three winners were produced. Entries were received from writers in New York, Florida, Oregon and California as well as Virginia Beach.

While the staff reads all submissions and narrows down the field, an independent panel of judges chosen from the local theatre community pronounces the final winners.

This year's winners included "Shrink" by Bill Wine, "I Can't Dance No More" by Dean Norton, and "The Marginal Man" by Greg Jenkins.

According to Pam Riley, programming supervisor, "This was definitely the best year we've ever had in terms of quality of scripts, directing and acting."

While very few theatres in the country stage one-act plays, the Virginia Beach Performing Arts staff is very proud of the one-act festival. They stress the valuable opportunity it provides for playwrights who may not have had a play produced before. The festival also offers people without much acting or directing experience a chance to develop their skills. One notice directed her first play in this year's festival.

Audiences see all three plays during one performance and all performances are free. Attendance at the one-act festival has been traditionally strong as theatre-goers take advantage of the opportunity to see new plays.

Start working on your one-act play to enter in next year's competition. You may be able to see it produced next year. Then it's on to Broadway!

the dose of any garden input can have disastrous results. Weed killers used in this manner can injure plants you never intended to harm, not to mention leaving long-lived residues in soil. Overuse of insecticides may kill beneficial bugs, harm plants, and render vegetables unfit for consumption. Doubling the recommended rate of any pesticide increases the chances of poisoning people by inhalation, absorption, through the skin, and by other routes.

Fertilizers used too heavily will burn plants, prevent seed germination, and contaminate water resources. Even organic fertilizers such as manure can cause harm if you use too much.

to be the first to announce her intentions to run was not planned, but noted that "any election in Virginia Beach is a tremendous challenge."

"You never know if you are first to announce," Oberndorf said. She said that her announcement came after receiving phone calls from supporters who were encouraging her to run and wanted to know if she was indeed running for the mayoral seat.

"I was responding to that," she said.

"I'm very proud of Virginia Beach," she said. "Virginia Beach needs continuity, someone who came into public service. I have a historical perspective."

"I have 12 years invested in

House of Delegates majority leader Tom Moss of Norfolk said, "From a political standpoint, this campaign spending has become a problem of image." Moss hits the nail on the head. With all the money floating around, a remark is heard more often about politicians going to Richmond to do good and ending up doing very well.

There are differences of opinion, but more and more political observers feel that Virginia is controlled not by the governor or the General Assembly, but by shadowy financial groups. A growing perception is that these special interest groups ultimately control politicians, the media and the formulation of policy.

Reform is needed. Telephone-number campaign funds must be trimmed. Gov. Baliles issued the challenge in January when he said to the General Assembly, "I believe the time has come for a fundamental examination of Virginia's campaign finance and spending laws. Runaway election costs and a lack of public confidence in the sources of campaign finance are eroding the foundation of our citizen legislature."

The governor is right. The time has come. Politics should be thought of as a public function, not a treasure hunt. — H.B.

Thanks to the overwhelming support of the South Hampton Roads senators and nearly every delegate that co-sponsored the bills, the elimination of the HOV lanes is near.

Last year, Del. Glenn R. Croshaw withdrew a similar bill because it did not receive much support in the roads committee.

This year, with all the much needed support and hard work from our senators and delegates, the bill is looking good and only has a few steps to go.

Hopefully, the residents of the world's largest resort city and the world's most persistent solo drivers can wish a welcomed good riddance to the world's most unwanted lanes — at least until the 1990's. — V.A.O.

Bayside

A student carrying a gun to school may not be a highly unusual event in a city such as New York but in Virginia Beach one would hope that a student doesn't usually pack his gun alongside a Geometry book.

Ignorance is only so thick before one realizes the way it use to be is the way it is supposed to be and should be. Students aren't supposed to bring guns to school like it's a number two pencil.

Melvin said, "We're going to get our people together, parents, teachers, PTA, and begin to talk about problems there and other places."

Let's hope so. Something needs to be done and done quickly before students start thinking that they are in the Old West. One gun is a gun too many to bring to school. — V.A.O.

speakers from the target areas to present their concerns.

Mrs. Alice Green, from Reedtown, said that city funds should be used if block grants are not available. She said that it was unfair to have started the programs which are not going to be completed with Community Development funds.

Isaac Herbert of Burton Station likened the situation of the residents to starting a fire and having no way of putting it out.

Rubie Driver, of Gracetown, said that the people want to know what the city's going to do. He said the federal funds may be cut but the people still live in the city. He said he was tired of walking and riding in the mud.

Ernest Benson, of Queen City, said the people did not like a swale system for drainage. The people want curbs and gutters. He said that more than $3 million had been allocated for Queen City from Community Development funds.

Sadie Shaw, Newsom Farms, thanked Council for the lights which the community had requested for 20 years. "Now you will see yourselves through the water (on the streets). The longer we wait the longer the land speculators are eyeballing our community." She said the community has land zoned R-6 residential available for development and the community needed houses. "We're dreaming one day we'll not only have houses but a meeting house."

The Rev. Charles E. Williams also said that the neighborhoods don't want swales because they are not attractive.

pulling together. I want to expand the economic base of the city. Home and property owners should not shoulder the tax burden," she said.

Since Oberndorf's announcement to run for the mayoral seat no opponents have publicly come forward to run. Potential candidates are Reba McClanahan and Mayor Robert G. Jones.

Oberndorf said that she has no idea if they will run, although she did say that Jones has been supported by some area businesses.

Jones recently has sent 1,700 letters to supporters inquiring if he should seek re-election. He said he would need a 20 to 25 percent favorable return to enter the race. His decision should be made by the end of this month.

Baum

"The rural areas represented are somewhat fading out," he said. "I think the dilemma is that a small number of rural areas dominate. The 98 percent above the Green Line make the decisions. The people above don't understand (about the rural area problems)."

He said "maintaining a rural society in a city" is difficult.

Baum gave the example of the conservation going on in Back Bay.

"The city bureaucrats and city workers don't understand. They try to tell the farmers how to do their drainage," he explained.

Baum has been a recent opponent of downzoning in the southern part of the city where he lives. He emphasizes the importance of making property owners a part in decisions which will affect their property.

His engineering expertise is also responsible for his decision to run for the Blackwater seat in 1972.

Baum was in the process of leaving the military services as an Army engineer when someone from his rural community suggested that he use his engineering experience on the city council.

"I was talked into it," he said.

He began his political career when Blackwater Councilman Earl Tebault retired. Baum, with a group of reformers, ran against the Kellam Democratic organization. He won with a landslide victory, receiving 64 percent of the vote, more votes than any other candidate that year.

Baum has never lost a precinct or has ever been seriously challenged since.

"Naturally, it's a good feeling," he said. He ran unopposed in 1976 and 1980 and received 71 percent of the vote in 1984 against James Snyder.

No candidates have yet to come forth for Baum's vacant seat.

Candidacy petitions can be filed until March 8. Only Blackwater residents are eligible to run for the seat.

"There are some things in politics I don't like," he said explaining that it's hard to tell people that they can't have what they want.

Election campaigns, he said, "You get tired of your own speeches. The small number of people that show up for your speeches . . . and the hecklers. Everyone promises the same thing, more services and less taxes."

Baum also said that the council "Meddles too much in staff work. We go into too much detail and run into too much time."

Baum is known for cutting-up at drab council sessions, usually at the expense of a political opponent. His spontaneous one-liners are vintage . . . Baum. His humorous wit remained true in the letter he wrote to his friends and supporters to announce his decision.

"Let me discuss one of the major reasons for that decision that may be helpful to prospective candidates. Since 1972, the strong trend is that the job has become full time (with very irregular hours) for a $15,000 annual salary without retirement benefits (except Social Security)," he wrote.

"In addition to sometimes marathon Monday meetings, council workshops, public hearings, etc. the amount of written material has reached unmanageable proportions (without any office expense allowance.)"

"I usually spend 20-plus hours per week by not attending most functions (days, nights and weekends) that council members are invited to, and by never answering any written correspondence. That is not advisable for anyone who wishes to succeed in politics. (Also, most politicians install an additional unlisted telephone or an answering machine to provide some family privacy.)"

McClanahan is also said to make an announcement soon. It is not known if she will run or if she will seek re-election for her Princess Anne Borough council seat which will expire June 30.

Deadline for council members to resign their seats in order to run for mayor is Feb. 26. Filing deadline is March 8 and Election Day will be May 10.

Window Works emphasizes service

Consumers do not buy drapes and blinds for their house or office on a whim, said Robin Nauta, owner of Window Works at 1560 Laskin Rd. in Hilltop East Shopping Center.

It takes time, he said because they have to live with their selections.

So, it is with an emphasis on quality service that Robin Nauta and his wife, Jan, have been operating their store since it opened last October. Along with offering a wide range of window treatments and accessories, Window Works experts are available for consultation and installation.

Shoppers can literally window shop as they slowly drive past the Window Works location. Inside, a showroom features over 20 different displays of blinds, draperies and other styles of window treatment for every type of window, including arched windows.

Window Works employs a store manager, an installer and three salespeople. All custom work that involves fabrics is sent to local seamstresses, Nauta pointed out.

Window Works is open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

CCO: One voice speaking for thousands

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

"I have no ax to grind," said Lee Banks, president of the Virginia Beach Council of Civic Organizations (CCO). "We're just not getting our fair share of entitlements from the media."

"My concern is that as Virginia's largest city and the largest (advertising) market of goods and services, we're not getting our fair share from the press. It's been an ongoing problem," he added.

The CCO, which Banks said is "one voice that speaks for a thousand," is currently in the process of contacting local advertisers and demanding that they don't support the financing of local television, radio, and newspaper coverage that is not giving fair attention to Virginia Beach.

Media entitlements is only one of many concerns, however, that the CCO has taken under its wings for the betterment of the city.

The group functions as a "sounding board," Banks said. "We'll aggravate (a problem) until something is done."

Another matter that concerns the CCO is that city council is too large to be effective. Banks said that one council member can represent a borough of 1,000 while another member represents a larger borough of 170,000. Each council member has an equal vote.

The reappointment of F. Donald Reid, a real estate developer, to the planning commission has also been of concern to the CCO members. They charge conflict of interest.

And also, that Virginia Beach

Virginia Beach Sun — Close-up Report is the largest city in Virginia and only has one senator; a situation which won't be rectified until 1991.

"Our representatives are not speaking up," Banks said. "(Del. Glenn B.) McClanahan is the only one that stood up for the tree bill."

"We (the CCO) communicate what the people need information on," he added. "We're not political. We have an influence for the good of the city."

Dot Wells, a member of the CCO, agreed.

"The CCO has maintained a respected position for all of these years. It has strived to stay above politics. Considering the political aspects of our daily lives, we consider both sides. We keep it even," Wells said.

The CCO is the umbrella organization to civic leagues and homeowners' associations in the city. It represents over 60 groups which Banks said represents "the majority of the population in Virginia Beach."

Civic leagues meet monthly bi-monthly or whenever a problem arises that will affect the city. It depends on the size of the group, which Wells said can range anywhere from 50 to 2,000 members. The dues for members in a civic league can range from $3 to $25.

"A civic league is ideally something like a PTA on a community level with an interest in knowledge," Banks said.

A homeowners' association, on the other hand, primarily focuses on issues directing their homes and neighborhoods. For example, decisions or erecting certain places may lower their property values, they will oppose. But, they will support, for example, neighborhood crime watch programs.

Wells said that the open forum CCO meetings allow members to sign up for a time slot to speak, a period that was initiated by Banks.

The 12 committees of the CCO, such as streets and highways, education and taxes and assessment, study the problems and help to assist the groups find proper authorities to reach on issues or how to go about solving a particular problem.

"We keep abreast of the problems of the city and offer

No love lost: Media vs. politicians

This column appears in The Virginia Beach Sun, The Chesapeake Post and The Portsmouth Times.

Commentary
Greg Goldfarb
Managing Editor

This week we'll briefly consider certain aspects of Chesapeake, Virginia Beach and Portsmouth and see what casual observations and comments can be made:

Big news: Mayor quibbling with metropolitan daily just before election time! Intentions, as of this writing, not formally declared. Will the media have an effect on decision?

Who knows?

Obviously, some know as much, or as little, as everyone else. What do you know? Like, maybe he won't run. Maybe it's a campaign to muster support by fighting the press. Maybe the press is attacking him.

Who knows?

Insiders know there's no love between the local media and municipal governments and politicians. Although, when the news is good everyone loves the media. That's the thing about a Democracy, freedom of speech is an inherent checks and balance

Council votes to delay teacher salary mandate; no action taken on family life curriculum

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council took no action Monday afternoon on a resolution proposed by Councilman Robert Fentress objecting to a mandated family life curriculum by the state.

At the same time, City Council adopted a resolution, also proposed by Fentress, requesting that new mandates, including the teacher salary mandate, should be delayed, relaxed or phased-in until sufficient funds are voted by the state.

The family life resolution notes that the Virginia Beach Public Schools has a family life program acceptable to the community and that the General Assembly should continue funding for the local program.

Councilwoman Nancy Parker said she had not had the opportunity to study the resolution long enough to vote for or against it. Fentress presented the ordinances earlier at a work

Council makes clarifications on Ferry Farm controversy

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A highly controversial conditional use permit for the development of the Ferry Farm was back before City Council Monday night for clarification of one of the 13 conditions attached to the permit.

The condition referred to a dam connecting Pembroke Boulevard to the Ferry Farm property with a ten-foot wide road.

At the time the permit was approved by Council last June, the dam road was considered a private road.

The developer, Old Donation Farm Partnership, was not to use the road unless it was declared structurally sound by the city engineer.

City Engineer Donald Trueblood said that the bridge was safe for use by automobiles and light trucks only.

Residents of the area said, however, that heavy construction trucks were using the bridge, creating potholes and undermining the safety of the road. Most of the speakers requested that the city close the road to all but pedestrian and bike traffic.

That's what Council agreed to do. A barricade will be erected across the road.

Also, the condition had required that the developer add a private road for the pedestrians and bicycles. However, Attorney Robert Cromwell argued that there was no point in requiring his client, the developer, to build the additional foot bridge if the road was to be used for pedestrian and bicycle traffic.

The Ferry Farm property is being divided into 39 lots. However, the original farm house will

Personality Profile

Fred Napolitano — The building of the man

By Valerie Olander
Staff Writer

Rome wasn't built in a day and neither was Virginia Beach, but it comes rather close. When you think of building, development and growth you think of Fred J. Napolitano.

Napolitano has been very influential in the home building industry. Not only in Virginia Beach but also across the country.

Napolitano is to building as Babe Ruth is to baseball.

Recently, Napolitano was elected into the Housing Hall of Fame at the 44th Annual Convention and Exposition of the National Association of Home Builders, which was held in Dallas, Texas. He was one of 14 that were selected for the honor by the Board of Governors of the National Association of Home Builders.

He will join the ranks of such dignitaries as Harry S. Truman and Franklin D. Roosevelt. He will officially be inducted into the 1988 National Hall of Fame in May in Washington, D.C.

"I don't know if you'll ever see, in a decade, the cities merging but immediately a lot is being done that affects the entire region."

"I'm very elated," Napolitano said. "I think it's a great honor."

Napolitano's career in the building industry began in New York, where he was born in Brooklyn and lived in Long Island. In 1951, he was an assistant superintendent for a building company.

"It was a way to make a living," he said. "I was providing homes for people who needed it."

In 1955 he came to Virginia Beach and has been very influential in the building of the city as it is known today. He is credited with building more than 10,000 homes and developing 6,000 lots. He developed Pembroke Mall in 1965 and was involved with the creation of the Pembroke area or Central Business District.

"It's the only area zoned central business district," he said. "Every city needs a soul and a heart."

"It's a very vibrant city; it had some growing pains but it will continue to be a great city," he said.

The growing pains, according to Napolitano, are the water problems, roads and transportation systems.

"The next five or 10 years will be of tremendous importance for the central business district," he said. "There is a lot more room to grow."

He also said that unless someone puts up a sign saying, "no more people are allowed in Virginia Beach" development is going to point in the direction south of the Green Line.

"As pressures mount, the Green Line is going to have to go," he said.

He also visions the five area cities merging.

"Hampton Roads is growing together. It's more together than five separate cities. You're seeing that now," he said, adding that the area Chambers of Commerce have already merged into one.

"You're seeing more and more

CCO

One voice for thousands

The Virginia Beach Council of Civic Organizations (CCO) is a worthwhile and beneficial group that has been around longer than the city itself.

The organization is far from a political group but involves itself with what affects the city.

CCO provides some very important functions to its members, such as education, communication and involvement.

The CCO helps to educate its members and provides information on how to solve problems that touch the community. It provides resources and places to turn when situations occur that reflect negatively on our neighborhoods.

Communication is what is needed to keep a city alive and allow it to better itself. Many citizens in other cities across the country lack communication. They don't know where to turn for help. Through a group such as the CCO it allows citizens to have an input and offer suggestions on how to make their community better. Without a civic league a citizen has but only one voice. The CCO has the voice for thousands.

The CCO also allows the community and neighborhoods to get involved with their city and make it a more beautiful and better place in which to live. Involvement is what makes cities such as Virginia Beach grow into as prosperous city as it is today.

Many people who aren't involved in a neighborhood civic league or homeowners association can moan and groan that they are sometimes being ripped off by the system but don't realize that they do have a voice.

Instead of complaining about the system, they can get involved with a local civic league where their voice will be heard and become louder and more effective.

The CCO gives the voice back to the civic and service minded people in the community. If you are not involved maybe you should be. Call your local neighborhood civic league! — V.A.O.

Light rail

Cities need to approve funding

What Virginia Beach and Norfolk need is an expensive new toy — a 17.7-mile electric train. Not only would it be fun to ride but it would also alleviate some traffic congestion between two cities.

If both cities approve local funding this year, the $110 million light rail transit (LRT) line would be set for completion by 1995, just in time for the 21st century.

The transit line would run between Plume and Granby streets in Norfolk to 19th Street near the Pavilion. A 40-minute ride would speed passengers along at 50 mph.

The costs on a 30-year bond would be $9.5 million in annual debt service. A State Trust Fund is expected to contribute $5 million. The leftover cost for Virginia Beach and Norfolk to share is $4.5 million.

Funding sources would include both cities providing direct annual contributions from general revenues, a two percent regional gas tax or issuance of bonds by the cities.

Virginia Beach and Norfolk should pass go, collect the funding and take a ride on the light rail.

Consultants for the Tidewater Regional Transit predict 5.8 million yearly riders and 584,000 non-residents using it with an annual revenue of $7.3 million.

Major costs for the proposed light rail system would be $34 million for rail line rehabilitation and new construction, $7 million for 14 vehicles, and $12.5 million for electrification.

The consultants foresee 17,700 weekday trips on the light rail, with 53.9 percent of all the trips beginning in Virginia Beach and ending in Norfolk during the morning rush. An additional 41,700 weekday trips would be made on TRT's bus services which will include feeder buses from the rail transit stations to the suburbs.

The light rail transit line will have 13 passenger stations, six will offer park-and-ride facilities.

Stations in Virginia Beach would be at Newtown Road, Independence Boulevard, Princess Anne Plaza, Lynnhaven Parkway, Great Neck Road, First Colonial Road, Norfolk Avenue and the Pavilion.

All of the Virginia Beach Stations will be park-and-ride except Lynnhaven Parkway and Norfolk

Off the Record

Shaking experience

What is it with handshakes?

I recently asked myself this question after a 300-pound gentleman released his vice grip and left my right hand — the one I use to take notes, take pictures, shift my car, walk my dog, throw the frisbee — pulsing in pain.

There is nothing that makes me angrier than feeling like a whimp. I am all in favor of a firm handshake, but I really think some people get carried away.

This traditional greeting plays an enormous role when we base our first impressions about people, particularly in the business world. The cold, clammy shake can be interpreted as that person is uneasy. The hot sweaty hand can mean that person has been worrying and wringing his hands. The cool, dry handshakes mean everything is going smoothly for the person possessing them.

I remember when a counselor for adjudicated youths, one of the most important skills was to stress firm handshakes. The limp fish handshake was usually rendered by those young deviants, saying little about their self-confidence.

Just like those limp fish handshakes, I think the sledge hammer shake says something about the individual — that he eats peanuts without removing the shell; he parks beside fire hydrants; he throws Kleenexes out the car window; and he sings to himself in the mirror.

The care of a person's hands also bears significance in the business field. Potential employers, so I have been told, look for neatly manicured nails.

On the other hand, I affectionately call into mind an uncle's hands. Years of hard work as a mechanic have made them rough with dark creases. But from those two hands a person could judge that my uncle is an honest and hardworking man.

I always tried as often as possible to hold my grandfather's hands, which were much like my father's — warm, supportive tender and caring. My mother's are also like that and, boy, do they have a wonderful touch when she has rubbed a sore neck.

Hands can also tell stories about a person. When I look at my hands, I can identify each mark with an incident that once occurred.

The scar is still there where I was stitched up for the first time. I had disobeyed my father's warning about "stating a glass baby food jar for: some snails I collected in a creek. Running down the street to the creek to fill the jar with water before my father caught me, I tripped, breaking the jar and cutting my hand. When I showed my father where I fell, he saw a bunch of tiny snails on the sidewalk and could put the whole picture of his young daughter's story together.

I wonder how the good old American handshake evolved. The act of touching a person's hand when being introduced may have started as an act of reverence to noble people. The it just evolved as a common gesture of courtesy. Only because some is the act reduced to form of arm wrestling.

Virginia Beach reacts to a school in trouble

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

Virginia Beach is a community which values its schools. We are smart enough to know that they prepare our most valuable resource and our future, our children. We also know that a top calibre school system is a key element in attracting industry to our city and widening the tax base — something essential to the financial future of Virginia Beach.

How do we react when one of our schools is in trouble? The answer, based on recent experiences, is quickly and effectively.

In my capacity as VBEA President, I met with faculty members at Bayside Junior and asked them what could be done to improve things at their school. I presented their concerns to the school board on Tuesday, Feb. 16, and there are signs that these suggestions are being acted upon as I write. Indeed, when I visited the school on the Wednesday following the meeting, two school board members, Vice Chairman Robert Clyburn and Gerald Gibbs were visiting Bayside Junior. Faculty members indicated that other board members had visited to investigate and show support.

Dr. Melvin presented the school board with a plan consisting of seven strategies to "identify and address issues that impact upon the effectiveness of the school." The strategies are:

- Focus Groups.
- Volunteer in School.
- New Images (Student Group).
- Crisis Intervention Counseling.
- Principal's Newsletter.
- Key Communicators Network.
- Focus Commission.

Many of these strategies are being implemented at this time. Parents serving as volunteers in school were helping in the halls and in the lunchroom last week. The New Images student group has begun activities to boost students' pride in their school. School psychologists are providing intervention counselling, especially to those students experiencing "tear or high anxieties being in school."

The administration's and school board's reactions, the parental and community support, the continued commitment of the fine faculty at Bayside Junior, and the continued efforts of the great majority of students at Bayside Junior who are in school to get a good education will get Bayside Junior back on the right track.

There is opportunity in Bayside Junior's recent adversity. Problems that needed addressing for some time may well be dealt with. Dr. Melvin and Bayside Principal Julius Wooten have developed a plan for assistance from central administration when a school-level crisis occurs. Teams of experienced administrators would leave their central office jobs temporarily, to assist the school in crisis.

The reaction of the school administration, the school board, and the community have been healthy and helpful. Everyone involved seems determined to identify the problems and find solutions. The discussions of the problems have been open and there has been no fear of reprisal for saying that problems exist. This is how a healthy organization should face its problems.

Into the Beach history books: The early days

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

As the Fire Department Historian, I am very dependent on some of our older Virginia Beach citizens to provide historical data as it relates to the early days of the city.

On February 12, one of the oldest living natives of Virginia Beach, Ms. Cornelia Holland, passed away. She was a very kind woman and had a memory just as sharp as any youngster. The two of us sat down numerous times and just chatted about the earlier days of the town of Virginia Beach.

Her father was the first mayor of Virginia Beach and she remembers vividly how her mother said that their house was exposed to the radiant heat from the great Princess Anne Hotel fire in June of 1907.

Although Ms. Holland was visiting her grandmother's that night, she missed the fire that was almost two blocks from her home. The window panes were so hot that her mother could not touch them.

She remembered the first fire station being built at 24th Street.

At 89 years old, she was quick with a joke and could remember the smallest details. She was truly a good friend. I will miss her dearly.

If you have any historical data or photographs, please call me at 498-8035. I am hoping to publish a complete history book this summer of the Virginia Beach Fire Department. Test your smoke detectors, for the life it may save — may be yours.

be left on the property. Residents, at the time the development was considered originally, opposed the application because of the traffic it would create in Pembroke Shores, and the adequate access. Without the dam, traffic will use Cheswick Lane for access.

The trees along each side of the dams were removed. City Engineer Donald Trueblood said that the trees were removed by (the developer with city concurrence) because of the damage the root system to the dam.

Residents also asked that the developer be required to put the dam back in its original condition.

One resident said that he did not like the idea of having trucks on the street through the heart of Pembroke Meadows.

Another resident said that the developer has ignored erosion and silt control requirements.

Curriculum

Councilwoman Reba McClanan said the subject in Richmond is whether localities can adopt its own family life program. She said it is probably one of the most controversial subjects. McClanan also said she served once on a home economics commission for the schools and that the schools do not have a family life program.

Councilman John D. Moss said that since the matter has to do with the curriculum, the School Board and not Council should act.

Fentress said that Virginia is fast becoming a liberal state. He said there is a lot of concern that the city will not have the ability to deal with the family life program on a local level.

The interest in Virginia Beach is evident, McClanan said, because the Legislature has received more letters and phone calls from Virginia Beach on the matter than from any other locality.

She said the State proposal is unusual in that the State seldom issues mandates for specific programs but issues guidelines.

The resolution adopted by Council points out that the Governor's budget proposes mandated increases in teachers' salaries alone that will cost local governments over $100 million in additional local funding in the next biennium. Unless additional state funds are appropriated, the resolution states, many local governments and school divisions will have to decrease or eliminate programs, services and personnel, while local governments are limited in their taxing authority.

Virginia's real estate tax effort is the second highest in the southern states, the resolution notes.

Funding for teacher salary increases will require a nine-cent increase in city real estate tax rates on the average and a four-cent increase in county tax rates.

The resolution was proposed by the Virginia Municipal League.

Vice Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that the question will be addressed at a meeting in Richmond Thursday sponsored by the VML.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr. said that he has drafted a letter with local statistics for presentation at the meeting. Oberndorf suggested that all Council members sign the letter.

DVH sponsoring programs for the blind and visually impaired

The Virginia Beach program will be held Sunday, Feb. 28 through March 11.

The main objective is to increase the independence of the blind and visually handicapped, thereby allowing them to remain as useful and productive members of their local communities.

Evaluation and instruction will take place in several key areas such as activities of daily living, communications, orientation, and leisure-time crafts and recreational activities. Upon conclusion of the program, individuals will have the opportunity for additional training, if necessary, and will be contacted on a regular basis by DVH staff assigned to their area. Some may choose to attend the Virginia Rehabilitation Center for the Blind in Richmond.

Back Bay volunteers contribute 200 hours

Twenty-one volunteers turned out for a Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge work weekend recently to assist the refuge with trail improvements and maintenance details.

According to a press release, Refuge Manager Anthony Leger said the volunteers consisting of four regular refuge volunteers, two members of the Virginia Audubon Society and 15 members of the Tidewater Appalachian Trail Club, contributed more than 200 hours of service during the two days.

The efforts of the group enabled the refuge to reopen the Dune Trail and to provide for a better organized and more efficient use of space in the maintenance compound. Leger estimated that the volunteer assistance saved the refuge nearly $2,250, he said that the figure was based on the estimated cost of the project if service employees had performed all of the work.

The refuge holds group volunteer work weekends every six to eight weeks to maintain boardwalks and facilities.

The next work weekend is scheduled for March 19 and 20 during National Wildlife Week. Volunteer trips are organized periodically and volunteers have opportunities to work on a wide range of individual projects.

Contact the refuge at 721-2412 for more details.

Cynthia Nelson, C.P.S., gave up watching the evening news for one year in order to study for the Certified Professional Secretary examination. Nelson is a secretary in the Personnel Department/Training Division for the city of Virginia Beach.

Cyndy Nelson — A certified professional

By Katherine Martin,
City of Virginia Beach,
Office of Public Information

Can you answer questions on supply and demand? How about the principles of management by objective, how to configure computers, or tax accounting?

Having passed the Certified Professional Secretary exam, Cyndy Nelson can. Nelson is a secretary in the Personnel Department/Training Division for the City of Virginia Beach.

The six part exam does not include a single question about typing or shorthand. Behavioral Science in Business, Business Law, Economics and Management, Accounting, Office Administration and Communication, and Office Technology are the six parts that must be passed in order to receive certification. The two-day exam is given in May and November.

According to Professional Secretaries International, only seven individuals from this area, including Nelson, were certified as a result of last November's exam. In fact, there are only 657 CPS's in the state of Virginia and only 24,365 worldwide.

Two other city of Virginia Beach secretaries are studying for the certification. Connie Pallette from Public Utilities has passed one part and Cathy LaFond from the Fire Department has passed four parts of the exam.

It took Nelson a year of studying to pass all six parts. "It was a challenge to see if I could do it," she said. "I made a pact with myself. I gave up watching the news, and studied every night from at least 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Then if I wanted to study more I could, or if I wanted to do something else I still had time."

Although it meant constant studying, Nelson believes it was worth it. In addition to giving her a broader level of knowledge to use on the job, she said that many of the larger companies, especially in the north, respect the certification.

"I've heard that on an interview, if two people are neck and neck, the CPS usually wins out. It also gives you something to discuss with people when you are interviewing."

Nelson first became aware of the certification process when she joined Professional Secretaries International two years ago. After attending monthly meetings and talking to other people who had passed or were studying for the CPS, Nelson was hooked.

She highly recommends membership in PSI regardless of your interest in the exam. In addition to workshops and seminars, it provides an opportunity to discuss work-related problems with other people who may have already conquered them.

Old Dominion and CBN offer classes for the CPS exam or you can purchase the manuals for home study. To find out more about the exam or PSI membership, contact Cathy Nirdlinger, president of the Tidewater chapter of PSI, at 482-4333.

Nelson is obviously proud of her status as a certified professional. "I never intended to be a secretary," she said, "because of all the stereotypes about the job. After becoming involved with PSI, I've realized it's a challenge to be a secretary. Secretaries probably know a lot more about a lot of things than most people do."

After passing the CPS exam, Cyndy Nelson definitely knows more.

Debbie Whitley and John Nimmo of Virginia Beach sign their marriage license in the presence of Doris Gregory, Deputy Clerk of Circuit Court. Gregory has been issuing marriage licenses for 16 years.

Doris Gregory — Tying the knot

By Jeri Guarracino,
City of Virginia Beach
Office of Public Information

If you were married in Virginia Beach during the last 16 years, you've probably met Doris Gregory.

Gregory is the deputy clerk of Circuit court who issues marriage licenses to aspiring brides and grooms.

"It's very interesting," she said. "I like to see people who are happy and who want to get married."

Because of the large tourist and transient military population in Virginia Beach, Gregory meets people from all over the world. She said her job sometimes reminds her of working for the United Nations.

"During the summer I meet a lot of people from out-of-state. They come here, get married, and spend their honeymoon on the beach!" she said.

The summer months are also the busiest for Gregory. Close to 1,500 licenses were issued between June and August in 1987. In addition to the summer, Christmas, New Years and Valentine's Day are popular times to "tie the knot."

While she hasn't noticed a decrease in the number of people getting married she believes couples are waiting until they are older. "I see a lot of people waiting until their late 20's and early 30's before they get married," she said. She has also observed a trend of older women and younger men getting married.

Age doesn't matter when it comes to being nervous. After 16 years she is used to the quiet ones and the ones who raise their left hand instead of the right when taking the oath.

What she isn't used to, however, are people who get belligerent — like the 15 year old girl who wanted a marriage license or the woman who didn't want her fiancé to know her age. Gregory said she doesn't take it personally and realizes they aren't mad at her but at the laws.

The entire procedure takes five minutes. After filling out the necessary paperwork, Gregory administers an oath to the couple. Marriage licenses are valid for 60 days. If the couple wishes to participate in a civil ceremony, Gregory refers them to the city's marriage commissioners.

Even after all these years, Gregory doesn't speculate on the chances of each marriage surviving. "The other day I had a 33-year-old woman who had been married six times apply for a license. It was the groom's third marriage. In that situation I wonder if it is the right thing to do. But who am I to say?"

programs to educate the membership," Wells said.

She said the contribution makes "better educated voters."

The organization stands as a repository for information to broaden the outlook of the city.

The CCO was founded in the summer of 1959, three years before Virginia Beach was officially a city. It was designed for the welfare of the city to make it a more beautiful and a better place to live.

Marion V. Renn was the founder and the first president. Her idea was to create a city-wide forum for any civic and service minded organization. She wanted to unite people with the bonds of fellowship for the betterment of the community.

The first meeting was held at the Community National Methodist Church in Acredale on the fourth Wednesday in October 1959. It included members of 60 civic leagues throughout Princess Anne County which represented about 5,000 people. The turnout was larger than anticipated. They voted to form a Council.

The purpose of the meeting was to create a Council that would not be political but would serve all types of clubs solely interested in the community rather than themselves.

The organization does not represent religious denominations, partisan political or fraternal organizations nor trade, or professional unions.

The officers are elected and not self-appointed.

Some of the goals in 1959 were to push for a new hospital in Hilltop, which is presently General Hospital of Virginia Beach. Traffic was also a concern. The only road from Virginia Beach to Norfolk was Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Presently, the officers of the CCO are: Lee Banks, president; Ron Makela, first vice-president; Deane Williams; second vice-president; Sonny Gregory, secretary; and Herbert Taylor, treasurer.

The organization includes 12 committees, a seven member board of directors and its past president, Dianna Close.

Lee Banks said that he would like to respect the ideas of the founder and get the organization to depict a proper role in the city. "We're a little bit off track but we're still a very influential and effective organization," he said.

"As a steward (to the CCO) I want to leave it better than I found it. We'll continue in the role we're designed to play. We want to make the committees more active than they were in the past and add dignity to the CCO," he said.

The obstacles in the way of the CCO are the same as any other organization, Banks said. That is, apathy.

Banks said the primary role of the CCO is to assist the member groups with finding the right people to go to for information. He said the second primary function is "communication — to act as a voice."

Wells said that "communication is the most important aspect of an organization." She said that there would "definitely" be a lack of communication between the residents of the city and the city without the CCO.

The CCO is also planning to be a part of the 25th anniversary celebration. Since the CCO members have been around for 29 years, they want to honor civic organizations that have been around when the city was chartered. Anyone with information of historical significance can call Dot Wells at 497-1120 or Judy Connors at 464-3640.

The next board meeting for the CCO will be on Thursday, Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. The CCO general meetings are every second Wednesday of the month in the City Council Chambers at 7:30 p.m.

Pembroke Meadows Civic League host Mayor Jones and Oberndorf

Editor's note: This article was contributed by Carol and Larry Guriolo, of the Pembroke Meadows Civic League. Carol is the league's newsletter editor and Larry is recording secretary.

Pembroke Meadows Civic Leagues, at its most recent meeting, hosted Mayor Robert G. Jones and Vice Mayor Meyera Oberndorf. These city council members were invited to discuss the criteria for appointments to city boards and commissions in an open forum setting. Councilman John Perry, representative of Bayside Borough, had also been invited but did not attend.

Initial questioning focused on the city council's 6-5 vote to reappoint F. Don Reid to the Planning Commission. Civic League President Bob Finley asked whether council had made any attempt to investigate matters raised in an Oct. 21 letter to city council regarding Reid's suitability for office. Oberndorf stated that she had voted for the nominee in opposition to Reid because of his knowledge and long-term interest in city affairs. She also stated that city council does not investigate alleged wrongdoing by board and commission members. Citizens should take their concerns directly to the commonwealth's attor-

In response to the same question, Jones stated that his vote to reappoint Reid was in keeping with his own long-standing policy of reappointing existing members of commissions. The mayor stated that he did refer questions about Reid's development activities at the Old Donation Farm (aka Ferry Farm) to the city manager and that a stop work order had been issued, because earthmoving began before permits were issued.

Residents expressed various concerns about the development at the Ferry Farm site, particularly whether the developers were violating conditions imposed by city council by using Pembroke Boulevard as a major entrance point for construction vehicles. Several citizens cited negative environmental impacts.

Oberndorf stated that the developers are seeking relief from some of the conditions regarding the use of Pembroke Boulevard. She stated that they may seek to build a private one-way road over the existing earthen dam, perhaps with gates to limit access.

The original conditions stated that if the developers were to use the dam, which is city property, they would have to meet city code and bear the financial responsibility for any strengthening of the dam.

In response to citizen questions about the stability of the dam, Jones urged civic league members to attend the Feb. 22 city council meeting where the city staff will present its findings.

The mayor stated that if the dam were to fail, "no one would have deep enough pockets to rebuild it to existing federal standards. When questioned about the city enforcing its own conditions for developments, Jones responded that the citizens play an important role in monitoring compliance and should report any perceived infractions to city departments.

In other discussions, Oberndorf utilized a city map detailing planned improvements along the Independence Boulevard corridor. Citizen comments reflected concern that road improvements be accelerated to alleviate the stifling traffic congestion that now exists.

In the business meeting before the guest speakers arrived, civic league members discussed bylaw revisions, activities of the Lakes and Waterways committee members, the successful repair of the brick wall on the entrance median, and positive response to the entranceway clean-up watch.

Luxford introduces students to the world of savings

Luxford Elementary School Principal, Verlin H. Adams, has had a dream come true. It all began when Kathy Hodges, a customer service representative at a local bank, made the initial contact for her bank and Luxford Elementary School to become Adopt-A-School Partners.

"I am very excited about a business-school partnership at Luxford School," said Mrs. Adams. "I view this partnership as another tool which can be used to teach students to value their education and emphasize to them the skills they learn today will be needed tomorrow."

Mrs. Adams wants students in grades five and six to receive information on investment savings and the students in grades one through four to receive information on savings accounts. The bank has made personalized savings envelopes in school colors with the Luxford logo for all students to participate in a savings program.

Representatives from Perpetual Savings Bank will explain the investment and savings program at the PTA meeting on Tuesday, March 8, at 7:30 p.m. at Luxford Elementary School. They will also explain the above program to the students the following day.

Commentary

system. In fact, of all the strikes that have launched, few have succeeded.

Not too long ago, an economic development director was forced out of a good job by information divulged and later published and aired regularly by the local media. Since then, more than a couple of veteran state legislators have either been forced from office or voted out: knocked off of the perch by having to explain ineffectiveness, conflict of interest, special interest groups, and/or corruption or sexual misconduct.

When a distinguished city manager left one city for another, unwillingly, who's to say how m.c. the media played in his career move. Certainly a city council had a lot to do with it.

And what happened to another local mayor after the media grabbed a bite of him? Where were the votes? Who sent them? Did the media play a role?

And now, a mayor is trying to prove he didn't have anything on his mind which could be perceived as a potential conflict of interest when corresponding with lofty judges about an extra income job that could come in handy now because of the money lost while serving as mayor. Public service does have its costs.

Who knows?

Media has big attorneys to protect its interests and some attorneys go into politics to protect theirs and their constituencies best interests. So where does that leave us? In the middle trying to figure it all out.

Boy, what some people will do for rills.

Now, this mayor mentioned earlier, he's a lava rock in an erupting volcano. He may run again this spring.

Who knows? That city really has to come together. It has to. It's a surrealistic piece to the Hampton Roads puzzle.

And finally, let's put it this way, the mayor of this fine sister city has decided to spend more time with a new home he's bought: in Tarheelville than run in what promises to be a hotly con-

Avenue.

Newtown Road, Independence Boulevard, Princess Anne Plaza, Norfolk Avenue and the Pavilion would have pedestrian access and Newtown, Independence, Princess Anne Plaza, and First Colonial would have feeder bus service.

There would be 1,718 park-and-ride spaces available: Great Neck Road, 503; Princess Anne Plaza, 342; Independence Boulevard, 260; the Pavilion, 248; Newtown Road, 246; and Oceana Boulevard, 119.

Seven light rail trains with two cars each would be capable of holding 320 riders. By the year 2000, it would increase to three cars per train. Each car will be able to carry 160 riders, 62 sitting and 96 standing.

Although ridership estimates are down from a 1986 study because of the change from a beach-front terminal to the Pavilion, the light rail transit system would solve much of the congestion problems on the highway.

As long as there are enough park-and-ride spaces available and feeder bus services available to the suburbs, naval bases and office parks the light rail transit system should be a gladly welcomed addition for commuters between the two cities.

Virginia Beach and Norfolk should pass go, collect the funding and take a ride on the light rail. — V.A.O.

Wender selected as Sailor of the Quarter

Sitting at his computer or behind the wheel of a crash truck, Aviation Boatswain's Mate Handler Third Class (ABH3) Ian A. Wender handles the task at hand. Wender's professionalism and unrelenting search for knowledge led to his recent selection as the Naval Air Station Oceana Sailor of the Quarter.

Assigned to the station's outlying Naval Auxiliary Landing Field (NALF) Fentress in Chesapeake, Wender thrives on expanding his knowledge and qualifications. He has completed Navy rating courses up through chief petty officer for aviation boatswain's mate in aircraft handling, fuels and launching and recovery equipment — the equivalent of three Navy ratings.

At age 23, the Pawling, New York native has seen four years of sea duty aboard USS Saipan and two years of shore duty at NALF Fentress. "Most of my off time is spent going to school," says Wender. Working through Navy Campus, he was able to arrange for St. Leo College classes to be taught at Fentress. Presently, he holds an associate in arts degree from the University of the State of New York Regents external degree program.

Wender recently replaced his obsolete computer with the purchase of state-of-the-art equipment. Since the one building at Fentress provides a home as well as work environment, Wender finds himself on off-duty time using his computer to assist the unit in word processing and file management. Using the computer personally, Wender says he tests it to the maximum when he tries to balance his checkbook.

Wender relaxes playing horseshoes or frisbee. He also coaches the Fentress volleyball team which participates in the captain's cup intramural sports program.

As Sailor of the Quarter, Wender receives a $50 Savings Bond from Sovran Bank, dinner passes for two on the New Spirit, complimentary room for two at the Lynnhaven Lodge, dinner passes for two at Red Lobsters, a luncheon with NAS Oceana Commanding Officer Captain John E. Allen at the Voyager Club, a letter of commendation and a station plaque.

area cooperation," he said. "I don't know if you'll ever see, in a decade, the cities merging but immediately a lot is being done that affects the entire region."

"Water and transportation affects each one. I see us working together; we're closer in the industry," he added.

"For the building industry, this is a prosperous area and a good place to live. It will affect its economy," he said.

Napolitano has four children who have all followed in their father's footsteps. They are all involved in the real estate and building business. He also has three grandchildren and looks forward to having more.

Napolitano has been president of all three levels of the Home Building Association (HBA). He was president of the Tidewater Builders Association (TBA) in 1963. The president of the Virginia HBA in 1968 and the National HBA president in 1982.

"Working hard," Napolitano claims is the secret of his success. "I try to do what is right. 'I'm fair in everything I do.'"

His biggest accomplishment, not only for himself but also for the country's concern, came in 1982, when the nation was in a deep recession.

Recovering from the recession was "definitely due to the housing industry," he said.

From January of 1982 until October of 1982, Napolitano met with President Reagan, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce and leaders in Congress.

"Being president of the National Home Builders Association was the highlight (of his career)," he said. "I was able to do some good and bring the industry back on its feet."

He said meeting with President Reagan was a "great honor." They met on six or seven occasions discussing the problems of high interest rates.

"Once I got over the awe of being in the White House I was able to tell him (the President) the problems. He responded like anyone else would," he said.

Napolitano explained that by keeping the interest rates low people are able to afford homes which in turn will affect the whole economy.

"Housing has a tremendous ripple affect," he said. When people buy homes it affects the other industries such as furniture, draperies and so on.

"We showed the President and the administrators of Congress that we could get the country out of the recession," Napolitano said. "Since 1983 we've had good years in housing."

The same year that he was president of the National HBA he also formed the Home Mortgage Access Corporation (HOMAC), which was established to provide builders with direct access to the secondary market.

"It gave us the ability to go to Wall Street so consumers would get better rates," he said. "It saves the fees passed on to the consumer."

Napolitano has a string of other accomplishments that he has achieved in the building industry. He has been honored as the Builder of the Year by both the Tidewater and Virginia state associations and has received the Distinguished Service Award from the TBA.

He is also community and civic-minded. He has been president of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce-Virginia Beach and the local Cancer Society. Napolitano was the founder of the Big Brothers of Virginia Beach and awarded the Brotherhood Citation from the National Conference of Christian and Jews.

Advertising design wins national award

American Corporate Identity, a national competition devoted exclusively to corporate identity, has chosen letterhead designed by Greater Creators, Inc., for The Breen Company as a winning entry, according to Greater Creators' president, Kim Cohen.

"It's important that people get what they pay for," said Mark Walton, owner of Sterling Finish. "We want to be able to serve the community well."

Walton and his two employees have been doing business out of Walton's home for nine months. They specialize in customer improvements such as interior and exterior painting, wall papering, stenciling, woodworking and molding.

They work Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. until whenever. "We're there to make the customer happy," Walton said.

"The clear fact is that I'm there until the work is completed. There are still few contractors who you can trust and get it right the first time," he said.

The company averages two jobs a week. Walton said that they don't take more than three jobs a week because they want to complete the job properly.

He said the best thing about their business is the quality of workmanship. "We're polite, we try not to disturb anyone and while we are doing a job no one even knows we're there."

"I hope we do really well and serve the community," Walton said.

Sterling Finish is located at 2136 Great Neck Road Square, No. 324.
